Papia Case

Jury Picked;

Inn Visit Set

By ALIDA JOHNS

A visit to the Northbrook Inn is slated on Friday for the Federal Court jury selected to hear the trial of restaurant operator Sally Papia and four others.

On Saturday the jurors may go to Mrs. Papia's restaurant, Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave.

Selection of the jury was completed Thursday, the third day after questioning of almost 150 persons began.

Seven men and five women will hear the case involving an alleged extortion plot and a fire at the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St., operated by a former chef at Sally's.

Four persons, two men and two women will serve as alternate jurors.

The jury will be sequestered after reporting for duty Friday.

For as long as the next four weeks, their home will be the Sheraton Mayfair Motor Inn, 2303 N. Mayfair Rd.

They will be guarded by US marshals who will monitor their telephone calls and mail so the trial cannot be discussed.

The government will buy meals and provide one cocktail at night for those who want one.

The jurors are:

LaVerne E. Graege, 52; Virginia Kyle, 34, the mother of five children; Marilyn Porter, 46, bookkeeper at a bank; Kenneth McKellar, 37, employed at Pressed Steel Tank Co.; Sharon Ziegler, 26, homemaker and mother of three children, ages 3, 6 and 10; Carol A. Leonardi, 24, a University of Wisconsin — Madison graduate and an occupational therapist.

Jerome E. Troug, 41, a postal clerk; Mark Falkner, 19; Edward J. Ott, 70, a retired local worker with a master's degree; Jacqueline Henderson, Erna Yeke and Lorraine M. Zinda.

Alternates are:

Michael J. Kempfer, 21, a volunteer fireman with scuba diving training; Mardell Christon, 36, a cosmetologist; Jean Af Wisby, 44, a college graduate and kindergarten aide, and Terry Pulvermacher, 25, a meatcutter.

The jury is slated to hear opening statements by counsel in the court of Judge John W. Reynolds before testimony starts. The government's first witness is expected to be Kurt Amidzich, former chef at Sally's and operator of the inn.

In addition to Mrs. Papia, the other defendants are James R. Jennaro, 44, of 1570 N. Prospect Ave., former general manager of Sally's; Russell J. Enea, 34, of 8720 Pelham Pkwy., a manager of Sally's; Maximillion J. Adonis, 40, a former employee of Sally's who is serving an eight year sentence at the State Prison at Waupun, and Joseph V. Basile, 34, of 1441 Cherrywood La., Brown Deer, operator of Publix Garage.

3 Extortion Attempts Made US Claims at Papia Trial

An assistant US attorney told a Federal Court jury Friday that a Milwaukee restaurant operator, Sally Papia, and four others tried at least three times to extort money from a chef who had formerly worked for her.

Leah Lampone, who presented opening arguments for the government during the trial, said Mrs. Papia had hired men to steal the automobile of the chef, Kurt Amidzich, because he had failed to repay loans of $2,000 and $5,000.

According to Miss Lampone, Amidzich received a telephone call from Mrs. Papia stating that the car would not be returned until the money was paid.

Miss Lampone said extortion was tried again in December, 1974, when Amidzich went to Sally's Steak House to see friends and received a telephone call from Mrs. Papia telling him to stay out of her restaurant.

Threats Described

According to Miss Lampone, Mrs. Papia told Amidzich, "How would you like your arms and legs busted?"

A third attempt to extort money was also made in December, 1974, according to Miss Lampone.

The jury of seven women and five men was selected Thursday. Four alternates were also selected. Jury selection began Tuesday.

Thursday, defense attorney Thomas P. Doherty, said it was important that the jury tour the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St., before the government presents its first witness. Federal Judge John W. Reynolds said the jury would be allowed to visit Northbrook before the first witness was presented.

First Witness

The government's first witness is expected to be Amidzich, 32, a key figure in the loan extortion and arson charges against Mrs. Papia and the four others. She operates Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave.

According to federal indictments, Mrs. Papia allegedly lent money to Amidzich while he was a chef at her restaurant. Amidzich quit as chef in October, 1974, and went to operate the Northbrook Inn.

When Amidzich failed to repay the loan, according to the indictment, his life was threatened and the Northbrook Inn was set afire Dec. 30, 1974. Amidzich is under federal protective custody.

Others charged in the case are James R. Jennaro, 45, of 1570 N. Prospect Ave.; Joseph V. Basile, 35, of 1441 Cherrywood La., Brown Deer; Maximillion Adonis, 40, who is serving an eight year prison sentence, and Russell J. Enca, 34, of 8720 N. Pelham Pkwy., Bayside. All of the defendants have pleaded not guilty.

Mrs. Papia's Lawyer Riled By Prosecutor

By ALIDA JOHNS

The lawyer for Mrs. Sally Papia said in Federal Court Friday that the federal prosecutor in the case would do "better to put her talents to writing a novel."

Atty. Franklyn M. Gimbel made the remarks after Leah Lampone, an assistant US attorney, made an opening statement in the case.

She told the jury the case would take them "into a foreign and unreal world where violence is planned as you and I might plan to go to a basketball game!"

Five Charged

Mrs. Papia and four others are being tried in connection with an alleged extortion plot and a fire at the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St.

Miss Lampone described the case as a "saga of threats and intimidation." Gimbel responded, "I denounce her statements as being fiction."

He said the matter being a case of "cutthroat gangsters" would not unfold that way at all.

Jurors Friday visited the inn, operated by a former chef at Mrs. Papia's restaurant, Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave.

They returned to hear testimony from the first government witness, Richard Schmitz, 41, who is under the protection of the US marshals.

Tells of Fright

"I was frightened," Schmitz testified in connection with a visit to the inn by Mrs. Papia and two other defendants, James R. Jennaro, 44, of 1570 N. Prospect Ave., and Russell J. Enea, 34, of 8720 Pelham Pkwy., Bayside.

Schmitz said Mrs. Papia accused him of stealing her chef and told him that Amidzich owed her between $5,000 and $5,400.

"You could come out here some morning and this place could be burned down," Mrs. Papia said, according to Schmitz.

He quoted Mrs. Papia as saying, "You're not Italian. You're not one of us so maybe you don't understand, but to be successful in business you've got to show respect."

Denies Charge

Schmitz testified he told Mrs. Papia he did not steal her chef, that he had not approached Amidzich. Schmitz said he told her he would talk to Amidzich about the money.

According to Miss Lampone's opening statement, another defendant, Joseph V. Basile, 34, of 1441 Cherrywood La., Brown Deer, telephoned a Jacob John Schlechter and ordered him to burn the inn for $1,000.

Miss Lampone said the "fire did not quench the thirst for revenge."

She said another of the defendants, Maximillion J. Adonnis, 40, ordered Schlechter to "scoop up Kurt and take him to a garage," so Adonnis and Enea "could bust up Kurt so that he'd never work as a chef again."

Serving Sentence

Adonnis, a former employee of Sally's, is serving an eight year sentence at the State Prison at Wauupun.

Atty. Joseph P. Balistreri, representing Basile, asked the court to dismiss the case on the ground that Miss Lampone's statement was inflammatory and had prejudiced the jury. His motion was denied.

The trial will continue Saturday before Judge John W. Reynolds.

Papia Jury Hears of Threats

By Monroe Walker
of The Journal Staff

A government witness told a Federal Court jury Friday that a Milwaukee restaurant owner, Sally Papia made oral threats to burn down the Northbrook Inn one week after it opened.

Richard G. Schmitz, 41, part owner and manager of the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St., testified as a government witness Friday and said the Northbrook Inn was visited by Mrs. Papia and two other defendants in the alleged extortion plot. James R. Jennaro, 44, 1570 N. Prospect Ave., and Russell J. Enea, 34, of 8720 Pelham Pkwy., Bayside,

"Serious Voice"

He said Mrs. Papia accused him of stealing her chef, Kurt Amidzich, and that Amidzich owed her money. He said he denied stealing her chef, stating that Amidzich was part owner of the Northbrook Inn.

Schmitz testified that Mrs. Papia told him "in a very serious voice" that "people who do things such as you have done to me can have problems in business. . . You could come out here some morning and the place could be burned down."

He said he interpreted that as a threat and "I was frightened." He added that Mrs. Papia told him, "You're not Italian, Dick, you don't understand these things. You got to respect people if you're going to be successful in business."

Schmitz said he told Mrs. Papia that he did not know that Amidzich owed her money and that she said, "I'm not bothering with him anymore, I'm holding you responsible to see that I get the money."

Tells of Exit

He said that as Mrs. Papia was leaving the restaurant, she leaned over the bar and said, "Dick, now everything is going to be fine. There will be no problems but I better get my money."

Jennaro was standing next to Mrs. Papia, according to Schmitz, and Jennaro said, "Yes, she'd better."

During opening statements of the trial, Mrs. Papia's attorney, Franklyn M. Gimble, called the government's opening statements fiction.

Leah Lampone, an assistant US attorney who made opening statements for the government, told the court that the case involved "a foreign and unreal world where violence is planned as ~~you~~ and I might plan to go to a basketball game."

Accused of Fiction

Gimbel said Miss Lampone was talking of a dream world. "She would better put her talents to writing a novel," he said. "I hope you, the jury, do not decide this case like some paperback novel."

Federal Judge John W. Reynolds denied a motion to dismiss Miss Lampone's statements as inflammatory and prejudicial.

Miss Lampone said in her opening statements that another defendant, Joseph V. Basile, 34, of 1441 Cherrywood Ln., Brown Deer, ordered Jacob John Schlechter, an unindicted co-conspirator, to burn the Northbrook Inn.

She said that a fifth defendant, Maximillion J. Adonis, 40, who is presently serving an eight year sentence at Waupun State Prison, ordered Schlechter to pick Amidzich up so that he (Adonis) and Enea "could bustup Kurt so that he'd never work as a chef again."

All five defendants have pleaded not guilty to arson and extortion charges connected with a Dec. 30, 1974, fire at the restaurant and alleged efforts to collect a $5,000 loan made to Amidzich by Mrs. Papia.

Mrs. Papia Alluded To Fire, Court Told

By ALIDA JOHNS

A former chef at Sally's Steak House testified Tuesday in Federal Court that after a fire at the Northbrook Inn, Mrs. Sally Papia lit a match and said, "I told you this was going to happen."

Kurt B. Amidzich, the chef, testified that the incident occurred last New Year's Eve at Trovato's restaurant, 1550 N. Farwell Ave. Amidzich was a government witness.

Atty. Franklyn M. Gimbel, representing Mrs. Papia, said Amidzich's testimony was inconsistent with previous testimony.

The fire at the inn, 9601 N. 124th St., where Amidzich had gone into business after being Mrs. Papia's chef, occurred on Dec. 30, 1974.

Mrs. Papia and four others are being tried before Judge John W. Reynolds on charges involving an alleged extortion plot and the fire.

Amidzich, questioned by David B. Bukey, an assistant US attorney, also testified:

In the Towne Room East at the Milwaukee Inn on one occasion he saw two of the other defendants, James R. Jennaro and Russell J. Enea.

Enea told Amidzich: "By fate last week you were saved. You were going to see your own blood. Your wrists were going to be broken so you could never cook again."

[The government contend-ed in an opening statement that two men were going to beat Amidzich with a base-ball bat. The night the beating was planned, the men were arrested by Milwaukee police.]

Enea continued, "I'm going to mess you myself," Amidzich said.

"If you think you're big enough, go ahead," Amidzich said he responded.

Bukey asked if Enea had a weapon, and Amidzich answered, "No."

Later, Enea's lawyer, Gerald P. Boyle, told the court that Amidzich had testified before the federal grand jury:

"Then he (Enea) started hitting me with a gun, and I (Amidzich) told him he was like a big wheel with a hand in his pocket."

"Either the man was lying then or is lying now," Boyle said. "If I were hit by a gun, I'd never forget it."

Amidzich testified he did not owe money to Mrs. Papia. Reynolds told the jury Amidzich owed Mrs. Papia "about $5,000; give or take $1,000."

Part of the money involved Amidzich's purchase of a Cadillac with Mrs. Papia as a co-signer.

Amidzich testified that one Saturday night at the inn the car was "stolen." He said Mrs. Papia telephoned him, saying: "Well, young man, now that I've got your car you're going to have to pay me the money you owe me."

In another telephone conver-sation, Amidzich said, he asked Mrs. Papia: "Boss, could I please have my car back? I need my car."

Amidzich said he then called Herbert Krusche, of the Wisconsin Department of Justice, and told him: "We don't need the publicity, Sally or I." Krusche said he'd have the car back in eight hours, Amidzich testified.

The trial will continue Wednesday. Reynolds said the jury would remain sequestered on Thanksgiving but could invite their families for dinner at their own expense.

In addition to Mrs. Papia, 43, of 2880 N. Menomonee River Pkwy., the defendants include Jennaro, 45, of 1570 N. Prospect Ave.; Enea, 34, of 8720 N. Pelham Pkwy., Bay-side; Joseph V. Basile, 35, of 1441 Cherrywood La., Brown Deer, and Maximillion J. Adonis, 40, now serving an eight-year sentence at the State Prison at Waupun.

Ex-Chef at Sally's Denies Role in Fire

A former chef at Sally's Steak House told a Federal Court jury Wednesday that he did not know who set fire to the Northbrook Inn or why.

Kurt Amidzich, 32, a chef who was a partner in the Northbrook Inn at 9601 N. 12th St., said he would never have hired anyone to set the inn afire. "I would never even have thought of the idea," he said.

Sally Papia, owner of Sally's Steak House at 1028 E. Juneau Ave., and four others have pleaded not guilty to arson and extortion charges connected with the fire at Northbrook Inn and alleged efforts to collect money from Amidzich.

In addition to Mrs. Papia, 43, of 2880 N. Menomonee River Pkwy., the defendants are James R. Jennaro, 45, of 1570 N. Prospect Ave.; Russell J. Enea, 34, of 8720 N. Pelham Pkwy., Bayside; Joseph V. Basile, 35, of 1441 Cherrywood La., Brown Deer; and Maximillion J. Adonis, 40, who is now serving an eight year sentence at the State Prison at Waupun.

At the trial, Federal Judge John W. Reynolds said in the absence of the jury that it was widely known that Jacob John Schlechter, an unindicted co-conspirator, had set fire to the inn on Dec. 30, 1974.

Schlechter, who is under federal protective custody, is expected to testify in court Friday as a government witness.

Runs Up Bills

Reynolds also said that Amidzich, while in federal protective custody, had run up $500 worth of bills within 10 days and that he had spent as much as $70 for one meal.

Franklyn M. Gimbel, attorney for Mrs. Papia, described Amidzich as an "extravagant fellow" who lived beyond his means.

After the jury returned, Amidzich said he did not see himself as extravagant but had admitted that he was unable to handle his financial affairs.

Stanley P. Gimbel, Franklyn's brother and tax attorney for Mrs. Papia, told the court that Amidzich owed Mrs. Papia $5,522 for loans made to Amidzich by the steakhouse.

He said that Mrs. Papia paid Amidzich's monthly car payments of $393 as additional compensation to his weekly salary of $500. He added that only five of the car payments had been treated as loans, according to corporate books, and that the rest were treated as additional compensation.

Robert O. Meier, an assistant vice president of the First National Bank of Glendale, 5888 N. Port Washington Rd., told the court that Amidzich borrowed from the bank the money to pay for his car, a 1973 Cadillac, but that Mrs. Papia had co-signed for the loan.

Claim Filed in Court

Meier said he talked with Mrs. Papia about the loan last January and she told him that if Amidzich failed to repay the loan that the bank should repossess the car before requesting payment from her.

Mrs. Papia filed a claim in Circuit Court last April against Amidzich for allegedly defaulting on the car loan.

Amidzich claims that he does not owe Mrs. Papia money because, while he worked as chef for her, he turned his weekly pavchees over to her to handle his financial affairs.

The jury, which is sequestered at the Sheraton Mayfair Motor Inn, 2303 N. Mayfair Rd., Wauwatosa, was not allowed to go home for Thanksgiving, but members were permitted to invite relatives for dinner at their own expense, Reynolds said.

The trial resumes Friday.

Garage Ordered to Pay $462

Otha L. Smith, of 3134 N. Julia Ave., was awarded $462 in small claims court Wednesday by County Judge Robert J. Miech in a case involving a 1972 car that was driven almost 2,000 miles when it was supposedly in a garage for repairs.

Smith made the claim against the Publix Garage, 3919 N. Green Bay Ave., and its operators, Anthony E. Pipito, 38, and Joseph V. Basile, 35, who were not in court Wednesday.

Pipito is in jail on charges of soliciting a prostitute here for comedian Sid Caesar last February and for threatening a witness. Basile is on trial in Federal Court on arson and extortion charges in a fire at the Northbrook Inn last December.

Smith said he took the car to the garage for repairs in July and when he got it back in September, along with a bill of $554, it had 1,926 more miles on the odometer and the ashtrays were full.

"I don't even smoke," Smith said.

Smith said he saw someone driving the car around the city 10 or 12 times during the two months. He said that when he asked Basile about the car, he was told that employees of the garage were trying to find the right color of paint for a new paint job.

Smith said the car's seats were dirty, the new paint didn't match and some stripping was loose.

Smith asked for damages of 20 cents a mile for the extra mileage, which totaled $385.20, as well as compensation for repairs the car needed when it was returned.

Chef Did Owe Debt, Papia Jurors Told

Federal Judge John W. Reynolds told a Federal Court jury Tuesday that a former chef at Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave., owed money to restaurant owner Sally Papia although the chef had testified that he did not.

Reynolds told the jury that Kurt Amidzich, 32, a chef who is a partner in the Northbrook Inn at 9601 N. 124th St., owed Mrs. Papia "about $5,000, give or take a thousand."

Mrs. Papia and four others are on trial on charges of arson and extortion in connection with a Northbrook Inn fire in 1974 and alleged attempts to collect Amidzich's debt.

Earlier, Mrs. Papia's attorney, Franklyn M. Gimbel, had told Reynolds in the absence of the jury that Amidzich "did owe money, and his claim that he didn't owe money is ill-founded."

Gimbel said that in addition to $5,000 owed on an automobile loan co-signed by Mrs. Papia and a $2,100 loan to pay Amidzich's income taxes, the defense would produce bar tabs and other bills totaling more than $550.

Phone Call Recalled

"That's only a part of it," Gimbel added. "There were other things that also constituted debts to Mrs. Papia."

Prosecutors agreed that Amidzich owed Mrs. Papia for loans totaling about $5,000.

One of the loans involved the purchase of a 1973 Cadillac by Amidzich, and he testified that the car was "stolen" one Saturday night while he was working at the Northbrook Inn.

He said he got a telephone call from Mrs. Papia, who said, "I've got your car and before you can have it back, you'll have to pay the money you owe me."

Gimbel had said in court Monday that Mrs. Papia had taken the car but that she had a lien on it.

Amidzich said Tuesday he had asked Mrs. Papia for an itemized statement of his debts to her but she never presented it.

He said that after the fire he saw Mrs. Papia at a New Year's Eve party and "she lit a match and dropped it in the ash tray and said, 'I told you this was going to happen.'"

Longer Papia Trial Ahead

By Monroe Walker
of The Journal Staff

The Federal Court trial of restaurant operator Sally Papia and four other persons on arson and extortion charges may last another two weeks.

The trial started its third week Monday.

Thomas E. Brown, an assistant US attorney and one of three government prosecutors in the trial, said the government had expected to present all of its 10 to 12 witnesses by next Saturday. But "it will take at least two more weeks," he said Monday.

Five of the government's witnesses have testified and a sixth testified Monday.

Thomas P. Doherty, an attorney representing defendant Maximillion J. Adonnis, 40, who is serving an eight year sentence at the State Prison at Waupun, said it was too early to estimate how many witnesses the defense would present. He said he would not be surprised if the trial continued until Christmas.

Federal Judge John W. Reynolds ordered the Federal Courts here closed Monday in memory of Senior Federal Judge Robert E. Tahan, who died Thursday.

However, the trial of Mrs. Papia and four others resumed at 2:30 p.m. because the jurors are sequestered.

Reynolds told government and defense attorneys to use

Monday morning to listen to tape recorded conversations between Jacob John Schlechter, an unindicted co-conspirator, and defendants Russell J. Ennea, 34, of 8720 Pelham Pkwy., Bayside; Joseph V. Basile, 35, of 1441 Cherrywood La., Brown Deer, and Adonnis.

Reynolds ruled Saturday that the jury should hear the tapes, but defense and government attorneys disagreed on how much of the tapes should be heard.

Day to Hear Tapes

It is estimated that it will take a full day to hear all of them.

The trial involves an alleged conspiracy to collect loans made by Mrs. Papia, operator of Sally's Steak House at 1028 E. Juneau Ave., to Kurt Amidzich, a former chef at the restaurant.

When Amidzich quit as chef in October, 1974, and went to work as a partner in the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St., he allegedly failed to repay the loans and was threatened, and the inn was set on fire.

The fifth defendant is James R. Jennaro, 45, of 1570 N. Prospect Ave.

Ruling May Allow Jury to Hear

By Monroe Walker
of The Journal Staff

Tape recorded conversations between a government witness and one of the defendants in the Federal Court case against restaurant operator Sally Papia and four others may be presented to the jury Monday, according to a ruling Saturday by Federal Judge John W. Reynolds.

Reynolds ruled that the tape recordings would be admitted as evidence in the trial on extortion and arson charges and told the government and the defense attorneys to decide on what should or should not be deleted from the tapes.

The government offered Saturday to let the jury hear "only those portions of the tapes which are relevant to this case." The defense, which objected unsuccessfully to the tapes being heard by the jury, said the tapes should be heard in their entirety if any part was heard.

Opposing Views

"I am concerned about the impression of the jury if they thought that anything was deleted," said Thomas P. Doherty, attorney for Maximillion J. Adonis, 40, who is serving an eight year sentence at the State Prison at Waupun.

David B. Bukey, an assistant U.S. attorney, said the government wanted the jury to hear only portions of the tapes because "there is a discussion in there about past criminal acts by Adonis" and that might prejudice the jury.

Jacob John Schlechter, a government witness and an unindicted co-conspirator in the case, told the court Saturday that he talked with Adonis on March 6, 1975, while wearing a concealed tape recorder. Schlechter said that Adonis talked about the fire at the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St., about Sally Papia, operator of Sally's Steak House at 1028 E. Juneau Ave., and about the other defendants and their involvement in the alleged arson and extortion plot.

Agreed to Co-operate

Schlechter said he was first presented the idea of wearing a tape recorder on March 3 after he had agreed to co-operate with the government and was freed from jail. He had been arrested on Feb. 14, 1975, on charges of armed robbery, armed burglary and endangering life in connection with another incident.

Schlechter told the court Friday that he had been hired to set fire to the Northbrook Inn and to "break the wrists" of Kurt Amidzich, 32, a partner at the inn.

Saturday, Schlechter told the court that after he got out of jail, he received a telephone call from Adonis who "told me he wanted to talk to me."

Schlechter said he called an FBI agent, who asked him to go to the appointment wearing a body recorder.

He said he wore the body recorder on March 6, 1975, and taped a 15 to 20 minute conversation with Adonis. He also taped other conversations, which are expected to be presented later.

Defense attorneys told the court that the tapes should not be heard by the jury because the subject matter was not related to the trial.

Joseph P. Balistreri, an attorney representing Joseph V. Basile, 35, of 1441 Cherrywood Ln., Brown Deer, said the alleged conspiracy was over at the time Schlechter wore the tape recorder and that "all that is discussed is presumably events that had passed."

Bukey argued that there was evidence on the tapes to show that the conspiracy was continuing at the time the tape was made.

MI only

Taped Conversations

Reynolds said the defendants did not know that Schlechter was a government informer and that "the conspiracy certainly hadn't ended at the time of the taping."

The jury, which had heard Schlechter's testimony but had not heard any of the other arguments, was given earphones to hear the March 6 tape but never started because of the disagreement.

Reynolds listened to the tape in the absence of the jury. The public and the press were not allowed to hear the tape recording which lasted about 50 minutes.

After hearing the tape, Reynolds told the court that background noises in the tape made it difficult to hear and "for it to be a meaningful thing to the jury, they must have some kind of transcript in front of them to follow it."

The defense attorneys objected to the use of transcripts.

Reynolds told the attorneys to come in Monday morning and listen to all the tapes and try to determine how much should be heard by the jury.

The trial, scheduled to continue Monday at 2:30 p.m., involves loans Mrs. Papia allegedly made to Amidzich while he was a chef in her restaurant. He allegedly failed to repay the loans when he quit in October, 1974, to work at the Northbrook Inn.

Amidzich was allegedly threatened and the Northbrook Inn set a fire in December, 1974, in efforts to force payment of the loans.

Other defendants in the case are James R. Jennaro, 45, of 1570 N. Prospect Ave., and Russell J. Enea, 34, of 8720 Pelham Pkwy., Bayside.

Solemn Judgment

Papia Trial Takes on Air of Church Wedding

By Barbara Dembski
of The Journal Staff

The tall young woman with the dark upswépt hairdo paced outside the courtroom of Federal Judge John W. Reynolds late Friday afternoon.

"I just can't sit inside there anymore," she said to no one in particular. "It's like being in church."

Her description was apt. There was a hushed, respectful atmosphere in the courtroom where restaurateur Sally Papia and four others were being tried in an arson and extortion case.

The polished wood pews to the rear of the dignified room, the 12 jurors sitting like bishops to the side, the gray haired Reynolds passing judgment on objections and debate all contributed to the atmosphere.

Marshals Are Ushers

Federal marshals with walkie-talkie wires dangling from their ears ushered more than 80 observers to empty seats in the room.

In fact, you almost expected to hear the lawmen ask: "Bride or groom?"

For it was strangers on one side, and friends and family of the defendants on the other during most of the long afternoon of testimony.

Reporters, artists and federal employees tended to cluster together to one side of the packed courtroom. One journalist noted that they were among the few who had turned up regularly during previous days of the trial.

*-Journal Sketch by Ed Wilson:

So it would have been standing room only — and the judge would permit none of that.

Save Seats

So the nicely turned out crowd of people who knew each others' names kept a watchful eye.

"Don't forget, we have to save a seat for her," one woman reminded her companion. They put a coat down on one of the pews, and gestured to a third person when she entered the room.

They and others sat near the front, near Mrs. Papia's daughter and father, who have been in the courtroom every day.

The observers wandered in and out, now for a sip of water, later for a walk around the fourth floor.

Someone brought hard candy and passed it around. You could hear the crackle of cellophane during the heated debate regarding inclusion of the name Frank Balistrieri in testimony.

Objections Raised

The battery of attorneys for the defendants shouted their objections to letting the jury hear the name of Balistrieri. He has served a federal prison term for tax evasion and has been called to testify in investigations of organized crime.

Atty. Joseph P. Balistrieri, who is representing one of the defendants, said, "It's a blatant attempt, in my humble opinion, to parade Italians before this jury to make this particular crime or alleged crime seem bigger than what it really is."

Later, a television news reporter asked the lawyer if the Frank Balistrieri mentioned was his father.

The young attorney good naturedly joshed the reporter.

"You know he is," he said. "I thought everybody knew that. I thought that was going to be my epitaph — 'Son of Frank,'" he said.

That, too, was part of the day's proceedings. Humor, laughter, smiles in the crowd, jokes from one attorney to the next, even when they were debating a crucial point.

Atty. Gerald Boyle, who is representing one of the defendants, also objected to mention of the elder Balistrieri's name.

"It's like having a bigamy case and mentioning the name of Henry the Eighth," he complained.

People glanced at each other and laughed. The judge laughed, too.

For a federal trial of such a serious nature, the atmosphere was relaxed. The casual chatter and bantering that went on during the recess was brought back into the courtroom.

But mostly, people listened hard, as is the case during any trial when there is a lot to say.

Witness in Papia Trial Tells of Anger Over Fire

By ALIDA JOHNS

Over the strenuous objections of defense lawyers, a government witness testified Friday in Federal Court that he was told "Frank Balistrieri was mad" about the Dec. 30 fire at the Northbrook Inn.

Balistrieri was not identified further.

The witness, Jacob John Schlechter, who said he started the fire with gasoline for a promised $1,000, testified that one of the defendants, Joseph V. Basile, told him:

"Frank Balistrieri was mad about it (the fire) and I asked him (Basile) what he (Balistrieri) had to do with it and he (Basile) said that Frank had had jukeboxes in the Northbrook Inn."

Schlechter testified in the trial of restaurant owner Mrs. Sally Papia, Basile and others who are charged in connection with an alleged extortion plot and the fire at the inn, 9601 N. 124th St.

Before Schlechter's testimony in the presence of the jury, defense and government lawyers argued at length over its admissibility.

Judge John W. Reynolds asked Thomas E. Brown, an assistant US attorney questioning Schlechter, to define the evidence.

Brown told the court:

"My understanding is that the witness (Schlechter) will testify that during this conversation with Mr. Basile, Mr. Basile indicated to him that there was a lot of . . . heat about the fire.

"And that certain individuals, namely Frank Bal or Frank Balistrieri, I don't know which the witness is going to say, was upset about the fire because he had supposedly a jukebox or some jukeboxes in the establishment and that no one had come to him or no one had said anything to him about it....

"And that conversation is repeated . . . when again Frankie Bal or Frank Bal's name arises from the standpoint of having at one time — I'm sorry Mr. Basile having at one time been picked up and had pistols put (to) his knees and questioned about who was responsible for the fire.

"And at that time Mr. Basile indicated to Mr. Schlechter, I believe Mr. Schlechter will testify, that Mr. Basile took responsibility himself. Said, 'I did it and the buck stops here, I was the one that was involved'....

"But we are submitting to the court that we are not letting it to prove that Mr. Frank Balistrieri, Frank Bal or anyone else in fact told Joe Basile anything about the fire or in fact did put any pistols or anything else to Mr. Basile's knees.

"We are submitting to the court that that is relevant for the proof that it was said to Mr. Schlechter. Not whether it was true or not, but that it was said to Mr. Schlechter because it's part and parcel of this conspiracy to keep him satisfied about the money that he is due."

Atty. Joseph P. Balistrieri, a defense attorney, argued that the government wanted the evidence for "psychological effect."

He said, "It's a blatant attempt, in my humble opinion, to parade Italians before this jury to make this particular crime or alleged crime seem bigger than what it really is."

Balistrieri represents Basile, 35, of 1441 Cherrywood La., Brown Deer.

Schlechter also testified that he had taken a board, knocked out a window at the inn, poured in gasoline and struck three matches before the gasoline would ignite.

He told the court an explosion from the fire knocked him down.

He said he was living in the 9000 block of N. 95th St. at the time and when he returned home, he could see the fire from his sons' bedroom. He said the boys wanted to see the fire, so he took them there in his car.

Basile gave him $100 of the promised $1,000, Schlechter said.

Schlechter is an unindicted co-conspirator in the case and is being protected by US marshals. He made an agreement with federal officials that if he told the truth no charges would be brought against him, he testified.

Atty. Gerald P. Boyle, representing another defendant, Russell J. Enea, said Schlechter was a man facing a 55 year prison term in state court.

Schlechter is charged in state court with armed robbery, armed burglary and endangering the life of another in connection with a Feb. 2 incident at a Greenfield home.

Boyle told the court: "Time-wise, he (Schlechter) is sitting in the County Jail and people are talking to him. And they know what they want to get from him, and he has a right to dream up anything he wants to dream up."

Schlechter also testified that he and Herbert Holland intended to break the wrists of Kurt B. Amidzich, a co-owner of the inn and a former chef at Mrs.

Papai's restaurant, Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave. Amidzich is the central figure around whom the alleged extortion plot revolves.

Schlechter said he bought a baseball bat to break Amidzich's wrists and two ski masks to wear so he and Holland would not be identified.

The night they intended to beat Amidzich, Schlechter said, he and Holland were stopped in their car by a Milwaukee Police Department Tactical Squad. It was never explained why police stopped the car.

He said he telephoned Maximilian J. Adonis, another defendant, and told him, "If you set me up, you'll get your head busted."

Holland also had been charged with conspiracy in the alleged extortion plot. He pleaded guilty Nov. 12.

The fifth defendant is James R. Jennaro, 45, of 1570 N. Prospect Ave.

The trial will continue Saturday.

Papia Defendants Split Over Debt

One of the defense attorneys in the Federal Court trial of restaurant operator Sally Papia and four others allegedly involved in an arson and extortion plot told the court Friday that her former chef, Kurt Amidzich, did not owe Mrs. Papia money.

Joseph P. Balistrieri, an attorney for defendant Joseph V. Basile, 35, of 1441 Cherrywood La., Brown Deer, said in the absence of the jury that Mrs. Papia decided to handle Amidzich's finances for him and "that was a mistake."

He said Mrs. Papia should not have "paid him additional compensation" (car payments) or paid his taxes.

Amidzich had said in court that Mrs. Papia was handling his personal finances and that he was turning his entire weekly check of $500 over to her while employed as a chef at her restaurant, Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave.

It was earlier alleged that Amidzich owed Mrs. Papia about $5,000 for allegedly making monthly payments on his automobile and paying about $2,100 he owed on 1973 income taxes.

Balistrieri disagreed that money was owed and requested Friday that Federal Judge John W. Reynolds give Basile a trial separate from the other defendants.

"My position is contrary and antithetical (in opposition) to Mrs. Papia's, Mr. (James) Jernaro's and Mr. (Russell) Enea's," he said. "They have to establish that Amidzich did owe a debt, but it's in my client's best interest to show that a debt was not owed," Balistrieri said.

He said it was unfair to try all the defendants together because he said he was doing the government's work by trying to show that no debt existed.

He said the only other defendant who also had an interest ~~est in proving~~ that no debt existed was Maximillion J. Adonis, 40, who is serving an eight year sentence at the State Prison at Waupun on two counts of grand auto theft.

None of the defendants can get a fair trial because the position of "two of the defendants is diametrically opposed to the other three defendants," Ballistrieri said. "If Mr. Basile is successful in his defense, then the other three will be convicted. And if they are successful in their defense, then Mr. Basile will be knocking on the door of conviction."

Reynolds denied the motion to separate the defendants, saying it was irrelevant to the defense whether a debt was owed.

The trial involves charges of arson and extortion connected with a Dec. 30, 1974, fire at the Northbrook Inn, ~~9601 N.~~ 124th St. The inn was allegedly set on fire after Amidzich resigned as chef at Sally's Steak House and went to work at the inn, where he was a partner. He allegedly owed Mrs. Papia $5,000 but had failed to repay it.

Jennaro, 45, of 1570 N. Prospect Ave., and Enea, 34, of 8720 N. Pelham Pkwy., Bayside, have been employed at Sally's Steak House.

Two Describe Debt in Trial Of Mrs. Papia

Two new government witnesses took the witness stand Wednesday in the Federal Court trial of restaurant owner Mrs. Sally Papia and four others.

One was Stanley P. Gimbel, tax attorney for Mrs. Papia and a brother of her defense counsel, Franklyn M. Gimbel.

Stanley Gimbel testified that according to accounting records, Mrs. Papia's former chef, Kurt B. Amidzich, owes her $5,522.

Amidzich has testified Mrs. Papia told him she wanted her money back. He left Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave., in September, 1974, to go into business at the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St.

There was a fire at the Northbrook Inn on Dec. 30, 1974, and the restaurant never reopened. Mrs. Papia and the others are charged in connection with an alleged extortion plot and fire at the restaurant.

The second witness was Robert Q. Meier, assistant vice president of the First National Bank of Glendale, 5888 N. Port Washington Rd.

The bank is where the money was borrowed for Amidzich to buy a 1973 Cadillac, with Mrs. Papia co-signing for the loan.

Meier testified that in a phone conversation with Mrs. Papia last January, she said if Amidzich defaulted on the car loan, "to take the car, start an action against him."

The jury trial before Judge John W. Reynolds will continue Friday after a Thanksgiving Day recess.

In addition to Mrs. Papia, 43, of 2880 N. Menomonee River Pkwy., the defendants are James R. Jennero, 45, of 1570 N. Prospect Ave.; Russell J. Enea, 34, of 8720 N. Pelham Pkwy., Bayside; Joseph V. Basile, 35, of 1441 Cherrywood La., Brown Deer, and Maximillion J. Adonis, 40, who is serving an eight year sentence at the State Prison at Waupun.

Beating Plan Charged in Mrs. Papia Trial

BY ALIDA JOHNS

A picture that the government contends was used for identification so the former chef at Sally's Steak House could be beaten with a baseball bat was introduced Monday in the Federal Court jury trial of Mrs. Sally Papia and four others.

Kurt Boris Amidzich, 32, of 4409 N. 91st St., the former head chef at Sally's, said the picture of him and Mrs. Sally Papia, owner of the steak house, was taken Dec. 24, 1973, in her office.

Leah Lampone, an assistant US attorney, had said in an opening statement that Maximilian J. Adonis gave Jacob John Schlechter a picture of Amidzich.

Schlechter bought a baseball bat and two ski masks, and with Herbert H. Holland and the "tools of their trade, waited for Amidzich," Miss Lampone told the jury.

Mrs. Papia, Adonis and the three other defendants are being tried on charges in connection with an alleged extortion plot and fire at the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St.

Amidzich testified that he was employed at Sally's, 1028 E. Juneau Ave., about seven years. As head chef in 1973 and 1974 he grossed $500 a week, he said.

Amidzich also testified:

He and three others started the Northbrook Inn in September, 1974. The inn has been out of business since a fire there last Dec. 30.

When he worked at the steak house, he was paid by check, then cashed the check at the restaurant and gave the proceeds either to Mrs. Papia or Russell J. Enea or James R. Jennaro, who also worked at Sally's. Enea and Jennaro are defendants in the case.

The check procedure began in 1971 because "I was having trouble with personal finances," he said.

In 1973, Amidzich said, he used his 1971 Cadillac as a down payment for a 1973 Cadillac. His wife, Rosann, and Mrs. Papia co-signed for the car and he gave Mrs. Papia the car payment book "because she was handling my finances."

The car payments were $393 a month, he said.

The testimony of Amidzich, now a chef at The Rick Inn, 9308 W. Capitol Dr., will continue Tuesday.

Earlier Monday, another partner in the Northbrook Inn, Richard Schmitz, testified he "wasn't getting any cooperation from the Fire Department or the Police Department in checking out the fire, so I called Ald. Clarence Miller."

Schmitz, under protection of the US marshal's service, said

Miller sent a Milwaukee police detective to talk to him.

Another witness Monday was Mrs. Janet Compton, a sister-in-law of Amidzich.

She said she was a waitress at the Northbrook Inn when Mrs. Papia, Jennaro and Enea paid a visit. Mrs. Compton testified she heard Mrs. Papia tell Schmitz, who was tending bar, he "stole her chef."

Atty. Joseph P. Balistreri, representing another defendant, Joseph V. Basile, asked Mrs. Compton if, in 13 years as a waitress, she had ever heard of a courtesy call when a new place opened.

Balistreri described it as "a lay down — spend a little money."

Schmitz testified earlier that Jennaro had put either a $50 or $100 bill on the bar when the three came in.

Mrs. Compton said she had heard of the custom.

Ex-Chef Denies Mrs. Papia Debt

Kurt Amidzich, 32, a former chef at Sally's Steak House and a government witness in a Federal Court case against restaurant owner Sally Papia and four others, said Tuesday that he did not owe Mrs. Papia any money.

Amidzich said Mrs. Papia had paid $2,100 he owed to the federal government in 1973 taxes and had co-signed for a $5,000 automobile, but he said he had been giving her the money to pay those bills for him.

He said in court Monday evening that he had been employed at Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave., as head chef for about seven years before becoming part owner of the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St., in October, 1974.

Amidzich said he was paid $500 a week but was having trouble with personal finances.

"The day I got paid, I would sign and cash my check at the restaurant and give it back to Mrs. Papia, Russ Enea or James Jennaro," he said. "I would give them the money to let them handle my finances. Mrs. Papia would disburse money for bills for me."

Mrs. Papia's attorney, Franklyn M. Gimbel, asked that controls be slightly liberalized for larger users and that the new strategy apply only to a small area in central Milwaukee where the air quality does not now meet federal standards.

This would eliminate the need for the county to spend $2.5 million for pollution control at the County Institutions power plant, which is located outside the area.

Proposal Backed

His proposal was supported by Adrian Wisniewski, director of repairs for the Milwaukee School Board, which operates 46 coal fired boilers that would have had to be shut down under the old strategy.

About 40 persons attended the hearing at the State Office Building in Milwaukee. Many of these were representatives

Plot Trial Tapes Refer To Threat

By ALIDA JOHNS
and GERRY HINKLEY

Reference to a threat to cut off a bondsman's toes will be included in tapes of bugged conversations to be presented to the jury Tuesday in the federal extortion trial of Sally Papia and four others.

Atty. Joseph P. Balistrieri said Monday that if the tapes are played he wanted the jury to hear a portion that dealt with a refusal of a bondsman to put up bond and the statement, "He was gonna let us take his toes off."

David B. Bukey, an assistant

Inn operators lacked city permit for jukebox; Page 5.

US attorney, said the words, "chopping his toes off" could be prejudicial to the defendants, including Balistrieri's client, Joseph V. Basile.

Deletions Argued

The comments were made as defense lawyers argued what should be deleted from the recording of a conversation between Jacob John Schlechter, an unindicted co-conspirator, and Basile.

Balistrieri said he wanted deleted any references to "Frankie Bal" from what goes to the jury.

Atty. Gerald P. Boyle, representing another defendant, Russell J. Enea, said his (Boyle's) name was on the tape. "With all due respect to Mr. Balistrieri Sr.," Boyle said, he wanted his own name deleted.

The case against Mrs. Papia, operator of Sally's Steak House, and the other four involves alleged attempts to get Kurt Amidzich, a former chef at Sally's, to repay a loan to Mrs. Papia. The other defendants in the case are James R. Jennaro and Maximillion J. Adonnis.

The jury Monday heard the first of several tape recordings to be introduced by the prosecution. The first involved a conversation between Schlechter and Adonnis.

Judge John W. Reynolds told the jury portions of the tape were inadmissible and had been deleted.

Testified Earlier

Schlechter took the witness stand to identify his voice and that of Adonnis. He had testified earlier that he wore a body recorder when he talked to Adonnis at AFL Motors, 1910 W. North Ave., on March 6.

Excerpts from the tape which ran 36 pages in transcription form:

Schlechter: You ain't kidding.

Adonnis: No, I'm not. Like I'm telling ya, you see (unintelligible) that . . . Kurt went squealing to the old man, started a big . . . argument between Sally and (unintelligible).

Schlechter: The old man?

Adonnis: Yeah, the old man from Cherry. That . . . John Piscuine went in to Frank, Frank Bal, and Bal sent somebody to see Russell. Russell's brother and him had a big . . . argument.

* * *

Schlechter: You don't suppose that Sally got wind of all this too?

Adonnis: We didn't let her know who's working. All she knows is that the two of us got somebody. And ya know she's been trying to get it out of us.

Schlechter: Really.

Adonnis: And we won't tell her who it is. Ya know, because I'm afraid with her in her own passing way she'll make a crack. She don't mean no harm.

Adonnis: But the least she Schlechter: No, I know, ya know, I'm left in the dark, ah, the way this all boils down, ya know, I'm starting to even get leery because I don't even know who I'm doing this for, it's ...

Adonnis: For who, you mean the other thing. You're doing it for her. When it gets done, she'll know cause she's gonna pay you.

Schlechter: She's gonna pay me?

Adonnis: See, if we open the door now ...

Schlechter: Yeah.
Adonnis: Unsuspectingly, the wrong crack to the wrong guy, only in passing conversation. After it's gone, you could care less, you understand, but you don't put the cart before the horse, ya know.

Adonnis: I called up there, he said Max, don't even come near the . . . courtroom. They find out you're involved (unintelligible). The deputy tells me this, I called to see, ya know. Hey, I want to get in to see ya:

Schlechter: Yeah.

Adonnis: I figure you're up in the bullpen. I can go in there.

Schlechter: Yeah.

Adonnis: Ya know that Papalowski tells me, Max, stay away.

Schlechter: Papalowski?

Adonnis: Yeah, the guy who brought you in to the courtroom from the barn.

Schlechter: Oh.

Adonnis: The guy that's in charge of the bullpen over there in the judge's chambers tells me, Max, is that you? I say, yeah. He says you know these guys? I said, well they happen to be personal friends of mine. I said I don't know what . . . the beef is, I'd like to come up and find out. He says do yourself a favor. Stay away, this . . . stinks. I says, you're kidding. He said, I'm not gonna tell nobody you called, that's how . . . bad this is. That's right, that's how . . . bad it was. They're trying to put everything together, trying to put Russ and Jimmy and me together with you and Herbie.

Schlechter: They don't know Sally's involved?

Adonnis: You got to stay out of that . . . joint.

Schlechter: Do I? Adonnis: Stay away from there cause they're gonna watch every . . . move you make.

Schlechter: Yeah, I'll pay that as soon as I get the money. Speaking of money, got any for me?

Adonnis: Not a . . . penny.

Schlechter: Really.

Adonnis: I drove in and I went and sold a . . . diamond ring. I had no business taking it out of the . . . safety deposit box. I didn't know if the . . . thing was hot or not. We got twenty-eight hundred to match up with the twelve that Russ had so we had enough to get you or what's his name out.

Schlechter: Huh.

Adonnis: Then I saw Joe Carini a week ago at ah, Travato's.

Schlechter: Yeah.

Adonnis: He tells me, yeah, I'm gonna hold you responsible. I says, hey Joe, you hold me responsible? The kid's in the jackpot right now.

Schlechter: What did he say?

Adonnis: Give them some time and get out on the street. Well, ya know, I'm holding you responsible. I said you hold whoever you want responsible, I said. See I tell ya how funny that . . . Joe is. Nobody stays in contact with him, he's like a . . . rat.

Tape in Papia Trial Tells ## of Threat

A man described as "Frankie Bal" threatened a defendant in the extortion plot trial of Sally Papia and four others, according to taped conversations presented to the jury Tuesday in Federal Court.

The conversation is between Jacob Schlechter, an unindicted co-conspirator in the case, and Joseph V. Basile, one of the defendants.

Basile is represented by Atty. Joseph P. Balistrieri, who is the son of Frank Balistrieri. The elder Balistrieri is a former Milwaukee nightclub operator who served a prison term for tax evasion.

Joseph Balistrieri objected to any reference of "Frankie Bal" going before the jury. His motion was denied by Judge W. Reynolds.

Taken at Restaurant

The transcript revealed the following conversation between Basile and Schlechter on March 12, 1974, at Marc's Big Boy Restaurant, 7926 W. Capitol Dr.:

Basile: Frankie Bal scooped me up with a pistol. He says why did you burn the joint down without telling me? I says because I don't like the guy. He says is that the only reason. I said I never liked the guy.

Schlechter: Oh, I know that.

Basile: Now you know why they were screwing with pistols and he don't know nothing.

Schlechter: (Laughter).

Basile: That's all there is to it.

Schlechter: No, if he don't know, he's . . . off. I don't know. My head is just . . . going.

Basile: All he told me he says — he says — why did you burn the joint down for without telling me. Because he says I was involved with part of that . . . He didn't own it or nothing he says, but guys were coming to him to say that bad things were going to happen to the guy, you know.

Later in the conversation Schlechter said:

"On the fire, then I can turn around. I can get . . . blown away from Frankie myself. All this was done without his permission."

Evidence Disputed

The jury heard one tape Monday.

The government claims that the tapes are evidence of a conspiracy, but the defense has argued that the tapes make no specific reference to anybody.

Gerald P. Boyle, an attorney representing defendant Russell J. Enea, 34, of 8720 Pelham Pkwy., Bayside, told the court that the word "she" is mentioned (in the tapes) and there's a lot of "she's" in Milwaukee Russ or Russell is mentioned and there's a lot of Russells in Milwaukee."

Reynolds said it was up to the jury to decide the identity of persons made reference to in the tapes.

Schlechter told the court that the voices on the first tape were his and that of defendant Maximillion J. Adonis, 40, who is serving an eight year sentence at the State Prison at Waupun.

Earlier, Schlechter had testified that the conversation was recorded on March 6, 1975, at AEL Motors, 1910 W. North Ave., where Adonis was employed as service manager. Schlechter said he had just got ten out of jail in connection with another incident.

Talked to Deputy

According to the March 6 transcript, Adonis told Schlechter that he tried to get Schlechter out of jail and that he talked to a deputy sheriff named Papalowski about the matter.

The deputy called Papalowski in the transcript is Henry Popowski, a bailiff in the courtroom of Circuit Judge Hugh R. O'Connell.

Popowski told a reporter Tuesday that he was the man named as Papalowski in the transcript.

The transcript showed that Adonis said this about Popowski in his conversation with Schlechter:

"Ya know that Papalowski tells me, Max stay away....

"The guy that's in charge of the bullpen over there in the judge's chambers tells me, Max, is that you? I says, yeah. He says you know these guys? I said, well they happen to be personal friends of mine. I said I don't know what the... the beef is, I'd like to come up to find out.

"He says do yourself a favor, Stay away, this... stinks. I says you're kidding. He said I'm not gonna tell nobody you called, that's how bad this is."

Popowski said Tuesday: "They are referring to me. I wouldn't deny that. But what they say I said, I didn't say. I don't know anything about it really."

Deputy Was Popowski

Last July 31, The Milwaukee Journal reported that a deputy sheriff was under investigation for allegedly supplying confidential information to criminal defendants and specifically to Adonis.

Although not named in the story last summer, the deputy was Popowski.

Sheriff Michael S. Wolke said Tuesday that the accusations against Popowski were "checked out and our investigation proved insufficient to warrant reprimand or suspension."

Popowski said Tuesday that the investigation died on the vine. He said:

"What information can be leaked from court? None, really. What information could I have given? None."

1-a Witness for US

"They're trying to put everything together, trying to put Russ and Jimmy and me together with you and Herbie," Adonis said, according to the transcript.

The government has said in an indictment that Enea;

James R. Jennaro, 45, of 1570 N. Prospect Ave.; Adonis, Schlechter, Herbert E. Holland, 32, a former massage parlor operator, and two others attempted to illegally collect money from Kurt Amidzich. Holland has pleaded guilty and agreed to serve as a government witness.

Amidzich, 32, a former chef at Sally's Steak House at 1028 E. Juneau Ave., allegedly owed money to Mrs. Papia, operator of the steak house when Amidzich's wrists.

Amidzich quit as chef and went to work as a partner in the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St., allegedly without paying the loan, he was threatened and the Northbrook Inn was set afire.

Schlechter has told the court that Basile, 35, of 1441 Cherrywood La., Brown Deer, hired him to set fire to the Northbrook Inn. He also said that Adonis and Enea hired him and Holland to help break

Inn Operators Lacked City Permit for Jukebox

The operators of the Northbrook Inn did not have a required city permit for a jukebox at the restaurant, according to city license records.

A government witness testified in Federal Court last Friday that he was told that "Frank Balistrieri" was mad about a fire that damaged the restaurant because Balistrieri had jukeboxes there. Balistrieri was not identified further.

The city requires a $10 "premises permit" for a jukebox or other coin operated amusement device in an establishment. The owner of the device also must obtain a $5 license tag for each machine.

City records do not show a premises permit for the Northbrook Inn or a license tag issued to a Frank Balistrieri.

The testimony about jukeboxes at the inn came during the trial of restaurant owner Mrs. Sally Papia and four others charged in connection with an alleged extortion plot and fire at the inn last Dec. 30.

The government witness, Jacob John Schlechter, said he started the fire for a promised $1,000. He testified that one of the defendants, Joseph V. Basile, told him:

"Frank Balistrieri was mad about it (the fire) and I asked him (Basile) what he (Balistrieri) had to do with it and he (Basile) said that Frank had jukeboxes in the Northbrook Inn."

The operators of the inn also did not obtain a city tavern license in their own names as required by state law and city ordinance, according to city records.

The tavern and restaurant at 9601 N. 124th St. was leased last year to William Gillan, operator of the old Driftwood Lounge, and Richard Schmitz, one of Gillan's bartenders.

Papia Judge Allows Quiz on Witness

By ALIDA JOHNS

A principal government witness in the Federal Court trial of Sally Papia and four others denied Tuesday that he had cut off someone's ear or shot someone in the groin.

Jacob John Schlechter, 31, made the denials during cross-examination by Atty. Franklyn M. Gimbel, representing Mrs. Papia.

Government lawyers objected to some of Gimbel's questions.

Atty. Joseph P. Balistreri told the court, "The guy (Schlechter) is a bum and I think we should be allowed to expose him for that."

Balistreri represents Joseph V. Basile, a defendant.

"I think it (the questioning) relates to the total man and I think it is proper cross-examination," Judge John W. Reynolds ruled.

The shooting was referred to in a taped conversation heard Monday by the jury. The conversation on March 6, 1975, was taped by a body recorder worn by Schlechter.

Maximillion J. Adonis, another defendant, said in the conversation, "That you didn't kill that guy is beyond me."

Another defendant's lawyer, Richard E. Reilley, questioned Schlechter about his employment. Reilley represents James R. Jennaro.

Schlechter said he had worked for Roman Lisowski Realty, from October, 1974, through last January doing landscaping for $150 to $200 a week.

Schlechter testified:

"There was a man by the name of Howard Bloom who owed Mr. Lisowski money and he hired me to try and collect it."

"And the authorities call your collection activities extortion?" Reilley asked Schlechter.

"I don't know what they call it," Schlechter answered.

"What would you call it?" questioned Reilley.

"Collecting a debt," Schlechter replied.

Schlechter also testified he didn't know Mrs. Papia personally except to say hello to her at the hostess in her restaurant, Sally's Steak House, and she never gave him any money.

The jury heard more tape recorded conversations on Tuesday.

In one, Basile tells Schlechter, "Frankie Bal scooped me up with a pistol. He says, 'Why did you burn the joint down without telling me?' I says because I don't like the guy. He says, 'Is that the only reason?' I said I never liked the guy...."

"He says, 'Why did you burn the joint down without telling me because,' he says."

was involved with part of that

"Not only did the old man scoop me up about that, but he scooped me up about two other incidents . . . the old man's hysterical, absolutely hysterical!"

Schlechter said later in the tape, "Sally isn't big people. In other words, she ain't got the right to give the — orders."

Basile responds, "She ain't got the clout to be doing this. It probably came through the back door with some friends of hers in Chicago and it turns out her friends are calling Frank's and giving the — details and he don't like it."

Balistreri had objected to the jury being allowed to hear the name "Frankie Bal" but was overruled by Reynolds.

The charges against the five defendants involve alleged attempts to get Kurt Amidzich, a former chef at Sally's, to repay a loan to Mrs. Papia. The alleged extortion plot involved a fire at the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St., which Amidzich and three others operated.

The fifth defendant in the case is Russell J. Enea.

Threats of Death Cited in Sally Papia's Case

A government witness and Sally Papia, 43, operator of Sally's Steak House at 1028 E. Juneau Ave., have both been told that there were contracts on their lives, according to statements Wednesday in a Federal Court case involving an alleged extortion plot.

Jacob John Schlechter, 31, the government witness and an unindicted co-conspirator, testified Wednesday that US marshals had told him he had threatened. Schlechter is under federal protective custody.

Franklyn M. Gimbel, an attorney representing Mrs. Papia, asked Schlechter: "Who issued the contract?" Schlechter answered: "They didn't say."

Gimbel asked Schlechter: "Do you know that the federal authorities also told my client that there was a contract out on her?"

Protective Custody

Since August, Mrs. Papia has been under the protection of the Milwaukee Police Department.

Earlier, Gimbel had told the court that Schlechter's fear for his life was manufactured by state and federal authorities who wanted him to act as a government witness.

"Are you afraid of Mrs. Papia?" Gimbel asked Schlechter.

Schlechter replied: "No."

Earlier, Schlechter has testified that he was "paranoid," fearing that the defendants would find out he was a government informer. He defined paranoid as scared.

The trial, in its third week, involves allegedly illegal efforts to collect loans made by Mrs. Papia to Kurt Amidzich, 32, a former chef at Mrs. Papia's restaurant.

Quit as Chef

Amidzich quit as chef at the steak house in October, 1974, and went to the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St., as a partner. When he failed to repay the loans, he was allegedly threatened and the Northbrook Inn was set afire in December, 1974.

Schlechter has admitted that he set fire to the inn, saying he did so on orders from defendant Joseph V. Basile, 35, of 1441 Cherrywood La., Brown Deer.

Schlechter has also testified that defendants Maximillion J.

Adonis, 40, who is serving an eight year sentence in the State Prison at Waupun, and Russell J. Enea, 34, of 8720 Pelham Pkwy., Bayside, hired him and Herbert Holland, 32, a former massage parlor operator who has pleaded guilty to extortion charges and agreed to act as a government witness, to break Amidzich's wrists.

The fifth defendant is James R. Jennaro, 45, of 1570 N. Prospect Ave.

Court OKs Hearsay in Papia Trial

By Monroe Walker
of The Journal Staff

The hearsay testimony by government witnesses in the Federal Court trial of Sally Papia and four others was admitted into evidence Tuesday.

Federal Judge John W. Reynolds ruled that the testimony should be admitted. He also ruled against a defense motion to dismiss the case.

Reynolds said the government had shown that a conspiracy existed and that the conspiracy had not ended at the time that government informers wore concealed tape recorders while conversing with defendants.

Hearsay testimony is testimony presented by a witness that was told to him by somebody else. In this case it included tape recorded conversations between defendants as well as testimony presented in court by government witnesses. The judge has told the jury that hearsay testimony may be admitted as evidence in a conspiracy trial if it is proved that a conspiracy existed.

The defense called its first witness, Thomas Schneider, an assistant district attorney from Milwaukee County, and all the district attorney's records related to the case.

The defense has also subpoenaed Milwaukee Police Detective Edward McHugh, who was a government witness, and all Police Department records connected with the case. Arthur H. Schroeder, 71, owner of the Northbrook Inn property, has also been subpoenaed.

Two defense attorneys said Monday that they also planned to call defendant Maximillian Adonnis to testify.

Dismissal Sought

Atty. Thomas Doherty, representing Adonnis, told the court that he would decide in each individual instance whether to allow Adonnis to testify or advise him to remain silent and plead the Fifth Amendment.

Monday, Atty. Richard E. Reilly, representing defendant James A. Jennaro, 45, argued that charges against Jennaro should be dismissed because there was not enough evidence to find Jennaro guilty.

David R. Rukey, an assistant

US attorney and one of three prosecutors in the trial, had told the court that the government had less evidence against Jennaro than any of the other defendants.

Atty. Franklyn M. Gimbel, representing Mrs. Papia, 43, argued that the government had failed to show that there was any direct communication or meetings between the alleged conspirators.

The trial involves alleged efforts to collect loans made to Kurt Amidzich by Mrs. Papia. Amidzich, who quit as chef at Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave., in October, 1974, to become a partner in the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St., allegedly left without paying the loans. He was allegedly threatened and the inn was set on fire last Dec. 30.

Arson Reported by Witness' Wife

The wife of Jacob John Schlechter, 31, a government witness in the federal trial of Sally Papia and four others, told the court Friday that she telephoned police on Jan. 6, 1975, and told them that her husband had set fire to the Northbrook Inn Dec. 30.

Phyllis Schlechter, 38, said she did not tell police then that she was with her husband when the fire was set.

Edward McHugh, a Milwaukee Police detective, had testified that Mrs. Schlechter had told him of her husband's criminal activities.

He said that she had talked with him "15 to 20 times" between Jan. 1 and April 24 and had told him that her husband had also been involved in several burglaries.

McHugh said the Police Department had Schlechter under surveillance but did not arrest him "because there was no warrant issued."

Mrs. Schlechter told the court Thursday that she was with her husband the night he set fire to the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St.

She also told the court that she knew of other criminal activities that her husband had been involved in and that she had supplied information about them to the Milwaukee Police Department.

Mrs. Schlechter said her husband drove to the Northbrook Inn early on the morning of Dec. 30, 1974, and left her in the car.

Heard Explosion

"Then I heard a small explosion and I turned toward the Northbrook Inn and saw flames," she said. "We then drove home."

She said he told her two sons from a previous marriage, "That's the fire I set."

"One of my sons said, 'you don't have the guts to start a fire!'" Mrs. Schlechter said.

She said Schlechter told her sons, "Come on, I'll show you" and took them to see the fire.

"I couldn't believe that he was taking my kids there," she said. "I said, 'Don't' and he said 'I'm gonna take 'em.'"

She said that her husband's involvement in criminal activities was repulsive to her.

"The fact that I'd gotten involved in any my children had gotten involved bothered me," she said.

Criminal Development

Franklyn M. Gimbel, an attorney representing Mrs. Papia, 43, operator of Sally's Steak House at 1028 E. Juneau Ave., asked Mrs. Schlechter why she had gone with Schlechter and gotten involved in his criminal activities. "Was it so that you could give the police information?" he said.

She said yes and added that she had known of her husband's activities before they were married in 1973. She said she had been telling the police about Schlechter's past, present and future crimes since Jan. 1, 1975.

She told the court that Schlechter had been involved in a burglary the day they were married. She also told the court that she knew that her husband would be arrested and placed in jail for about 55 years if he did not serve as a government witness in the Papia case.

She said Schlechter had told her that he was going to break the wrists of Kurt Amidzich, 32, a partner in the Northbrook Inn.

"I said at least that can heal," she said. "But he said not the way I'm going to do it. The bone he was supposed to have had in his wrists would be nothing but dust."

Protective Custody

Mr. and Mrs. Schlechter, both government witnesses, are under federal protective custody.

Schlechter has testified that he set fire to the Northbrook Inn on orders from defendant Joseph V. Basile, 35, of 1441 Cherrywood La., Brown Deer. Schlechter also told the court that he was hired by defendants Russell J. Enea, 34, of 8720 Pelham Pkwy., Bayside, and Maximillion J. Adonis, 40, who is serving an eight year sentence at the State Prison at Waupun, to break Amidzich's wrists.

Amidzich allegedly failed to repay loans made to him by Mrs. Papia while he was employed as chef at her restaurant.

After he quit in October of 1974 to start work at the Northbrook Inn, he was allegedly threatened and the inn was set afire.

The fifth defendant is James R. Jennaro, 45, of 1570 N. Prospect Ave. All five defendants have pleaded not guilty.

Papia Defense Challenges Witness

Defense attorneys in the federal trial of restaurant operator Sally Papia and four others allegedly involved in an extortion plot questioned the credibility and character of a government witness Tuesday.

Franklyn M. Gimbel, attorney for Mrs. Papia, 43, operator of Sally's Steak House at 1028 E. Juneau Ave., told the court in the absence of the jury that Jacob John Schlechter, 31, an unindicted co-conspirator, had made a deal with the government to testify in this trial in exchange for not being prosecuted and imprisoned for up to 55 years on another charge.

Gimbel asked Schlechter if he had told the government that he used strong-arm tactics to collect debts on several occasions. Schlechter replied: "No, I did not."

Admits Other Acts

Schlechter admitted that he had been involved in other criminal activities, including theft of a boat motor and trailer. He denied, however, that he had cut off anyone's ear or shot someone in the groin, as alleged by Gimbel.

Thomas E. Brown, an assistant US attorney, objected to the questions, saying the defense was trying to discredit the witness by mentioning criminal activities not related to the trial.

Joseph P. Balistrieri, attorney for defendant Joseph V. Basile, 35, of 1441 Cherrywood La., Brown Deer, said Schlechter should be "exposed for the kind of guy he is."

"The guy's a bum and I think we should be allowed to expose him for that," Balistrieri said.

Federal Judge John W. Reynolds ruled that the past criminal activities of Schlechter were related to the trial.

More Tapes Offered

The government presented more tape conversations among the defendants Tuesday, including one in which Schlechter told another defendant, Maximillion J. Adonis, that he thought somebody higher than Mrs. Papia had given the order to burn down the Northbrook Inn and to "break the wrists of Kurt Amidzich." Amidzich, 32, was a partner in the Northbrook Inn at 9601 N. 124th St.

Basile answered, according to the transcript: "She ain't got the clout to be doing this. It probably came through the back door with some friends of hers in Chicago...."

According to a transcript of another conversation, Schlechter had called Adonis, 40, who is now serving an eight-year sentence at the State Prison at Waupun; and asked him how he knew Schlechter had set fire to the Northbrook Inn on Dec. 30, 1974.

Adonnis answered that he did not know that Schlechter had set fire to the inn "but what I just can't understand is where it came from, who told you to go and do it."

In another conversation between Schlechter and defendant Russell J. Enea, 34, of 8720 Pelham Pkwy., Bayside, Schlechter asked Enea when he would be paid for going to "break Kurt's wrists."

Enea: Nothing was done.

Schlechter: Yeah, but time was invested in it.

Enea: We would have already had him, if you wouldn't have gotten outta line, you."

Schlechter: "Who got outta line? Everybody's gotta live, right?"

Earlier, Schlechter had testified that the conversations were recorded while he wore a concealed tape recorder and while he talked over a phone wiretapped by the FBI.

The trial stems from alleged efforts to illegally collect money from Amidzich, a former chef at Sally's Steak House. Mrs. Papia allegedly lent Amidzich money, and when he quit as chef in October, 1974, he failed to repay the loans.

Amidzich then allegedly was threatened, and the Northbrook Inn was set afire.

Papia Defense About to Begin

By Monroe Walker
of The Journal Staff

The government presented the last of its 23 witnesses Saturday and will continue to argue Monday for admission of hearsay testimony as evidence in the Federal Court trial of Sally Papia and four others allegedly involved in an extortion conspiracy.

The defense is expected to put its first witness on the stand Monday afternoon.

David B. Bukey, an assistant US attorney and one of three prosecutors in the case, argued Saturday that all testimony by government witnesses, including the hearsay, indicated that a conspiracy existed.

Federal Judge John W. Reynolds, who had not yet ruled on the hearsay testimony, had told the jury that hearsay testimony (when a witness tells the court something that was told to him by somebody else) could be admitted in conspiracy trials only if it were proved that a conspiracy existed.

Defense Opposed.

Defense attorneys argued Saturday that the hearsay testimony should not be admitted.

Franklyn M. Gimbel, an attorney representing Mrs. Papia, 43, operator of Sally's Steak House at 1028 E. Juneau Ave., told the court that the government had failed to prove that a conspiracy existed "at least as far as my client is concerned."

It is also expected that defense attorneys will ask Monday that the charges against the defendants be dismissed. Atty. Richard E. Reilly, representing defendant James R. Jennaro, 45, of 1570 N. Prospect Ave., has told the court that most of the government witnesses either did not know Jennaro or had no contact with him.

Contract Mentioned

Herbert H. Holland, 32, the government's last witness, testified Saturday that he had told two of the defendants as early as March that Jacob John Schlechter, 31, an unindicted co-conspirator, was a government informer.

He said that about March 12 Schlechter phoned him and "told me he was co-operating with authorities . . . that there was a contract out on him and that I should watch his kids."

Holland said he told defend-

Amidzich, who had been a chef at Sally's Steak House, quit in October, 1974, to become a partner in the inn.

Allegedly, Amidzich left the steak house and failed to repay $5,000 in loans made to him by Mrs. Papia. He was allegedly threatened, and the Northbrook Inn was set on fire.

(Indicate page, name of newspaper, city and state.)

Not Guilty Pleas

All the defendants have pleaded not guilty in the alleged conspiracy to commit arson and extortion. The trial begins its fourth week Monday.

nts Joseph V. Basile, 35, and Maximillion J. Adonis, 40, who is serving an eight year sentence at the State Prison at Waupun, "either the day he (Schlechter) called or the day after" that Schlechter was a government informer.

He said Basile also told him that a contract was out on Schlechter's life.

Under Guard

Schlechter, who has told the court that he became a government informer last March, is under federal protective custody.

Schlechter's wife, Phyllis, Holland and one other government witness are also under protective custody.

Schlechter has testified that he set fire to the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St., on Dec. 30, 1974, on orders from Basile. He also told the court that he and Holland had been hired by Adonis and another defendant, Russell J. Enea, 34, of 8720 N. Pelham Pkwy., Bayside, to break the wrists of Kurt Amidzich, 32, a business partner in the Northbrook Inn.

Final US Witness Called in Papia Trial

By ALIDA JOHNS

Government lawyers Friday called their final witness in the federal court jury trial of restaurant operator Sally Papia and four others.

The witness is Herbert H. Holland, 32, who has pleaded guilty to the charge of conspiracy in an extortion plot.

Holland was charged in the same federal grand jury indictment with Mrs. Papia and the other defendants, James R. Pennaro, Maximillion J. Adonnis, Joseph V. Basile and Russell J. Enea.

Holland, former operator of a massage parlor, told the court he was co-operating with the government. He is under the protection of the US Marshal Service.

Holland testified:

Jacob John Schlechter, an unindicted co-conspirator, told him he set fire to the Northbrook Inn, where Sally's former chef, Kurt B. Amidzich, was in business.

At a meeting with Schlechter, Adonnis told them "Sally was hot" about Amidzich, who had quit and owed her $5,000.

Adonnis wanted Amidzich "scooped up" and taken to a garage where Adonnis and Enea would beat him.

Later, however, Adonnis gave Schlechter a picture of Amidzich and said Adonnis and Enea "didn't want the job done by themselves. Russ was fit to be tied. He wanted us to do the job."

One night after the incident, at the bar at Sally's Steak House, he heard Enea "raise his voice" and say, "I want Kurt's wrists broken so he can't cook again."

Schlechter said, "The job will get done," and Mrs. Papia who was three feet behind Schlechter, "turned around and looked at Russ."

Schlechter showed him the baseball bat he bought to beat Amidzich, and he tried on one of the ski masks they were going to wear while breaking Amidzich's wrists.

Papia Defense May Call Buccieri

By Richard L. Kenyon
of The Journal Staff

Frank (The Horse) Buccieri, once the fiance of Sally Papia and the brother of one of Chicago's late top hoodlums, is expected to be called as a defense witness in the extortion case against Mrs. Papia and four others.

Sources in the Federal Building where the Papia trial is being held said Frank A. Trovato Jr., operator of Trovato's restaurant, 1550 N. Farwell Ave., is also expected to be subpoenaed by the defense.

It is not known, sources said, when or whether the two men would respond to the subpoenas being prepared. However, they will not appear before the government rests its case.

Up until a month or so ago, sources said, Buccieri kept an apartment on Milwaukee's East Side and spent much of his time at Trovato's restaurant.

"He's now in Palm Springs (Calif.)," a source said, "and it appears he intends to remain there."

Upon questioning from a reporter, Gerald P. Boyle, the lawyer representing Russell J. Enea, one of the five defendants, said he intended to call Buccieri and Trovato "for reasons that will be developed later."

Boyle would not explain. However, other sources said Buccieri was linked with Kurt Amidzich, one of the principal government witnesses, through his close associate, Frank Trovato.

Trovato and Amidzich are reported to be good friends, their relationship going back to when they both worked at Mrs. Papia's restaurant, Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Junéau Ave.

Mrs. Papia, who the government claims wanted Amidzich to pay her money that he owed her, is charged with the other four defendants in connection with a fire last Dec. 30 at the Northbrook Inn.

Mrs. Papia and Buccieri

Frank Buccieri

were to be married in January, 1971, in Mexico. However, the marriage was apparently not valid since Buccieri was married to another woman at the time.

Buccieri is the brother of the late Fiore (Fifi) Buccieri, who was linked to extensive loan shark operations in the Chicago area.

Wife Testifies on Schlechter's Role in Plot

By ALIDA JOHNS

The wife of Jacob John Schlechter testified Thursday in Federal Court that her husband told her he was going to make dust out of the wrist bones of a former chef at Sally's Steak House.

Mrs. Phyllis Schlechter, 38, took the witness stand in the jury trial of restaurant operator Sally Papia and four others charged in an alleged extortion plot.

Mrs. Schlechter told the court her husband said he was not going to beat Kurt B. Amidzich, the former chef, but he was going to break his wrists.

"I said at least that can heal," Mrs. Schlechter testified. "He said not the way he was going to do it. The bone he (Amidzich) was supposed to have in his wrist would be nothing but dust."

"Didn't that make you sick to your stomach?" Atty. Franklyn M. Gimbel, representing Mrs. Papia, asked Mrs. Schlechter.

"Yes, it did," she answered. "Then why didn't you tell him (Schlechter)?" Gimbel questioned.

"You don't tell him anything," responded Mrs. Schlechter.

She said she was about 5 feet, 4 inches tall and weighed 105 pounds while her husband was 6 feet 4 inches tall and weighed 240 pounds.

Schlechter, a principal government witness, and his wife are under the protection of the US Marshal Service.

Mrs. Schlechter, questioned by Leah Lamponi, an assistant US attorney, also told how she rode along with her husband when he set fire to the Northbrook Inn, where Amidzich was in business after he left Sally's.

She testified:

When they got to the inn, Schlechter got out of the car. She asked him, "What are you doing?"

"Shut the damn (car) door, because the lights are on," Schlechter told her.

When Schlechter returned to the car, she asked him, "What in the world is going on?" and he said, "I told you I had something to do for Joe."

When they returned home, her husband told her two sons that he set the fire.

"One of my sons said, 'You don't have the guts to start a fire,'" she said.

"Come on, I'll show you," Schlechter said.

"I couldn't believe he was taking my kid there (to the fire scene)," she said.

She said she called the "arson squad" on Jan. 3 to report the Dec. 30, 1974, fire because "my children were involved."

The trial will continue Friday before Judge John W. Reynolds.

Defendant Denies Threat to Chef

Russell J. Enea, 34, testified in a Federal Court extortion trial Thursday that he never hired Jacob John Schlechter to break the wrists of Kurt Amidzich, former chef at Sally's Steak House.

"Schlechter came to me and said, 'I understand you don't like Kurt. Do you want me to take care of him for you?'" Enea said.

"I said, 'Mind your own business, and stay out of mine,'" Enea testified.

Schlechter has testified in the trial of Sally Papia and four others that Enea hired him to break Amidzich's wrists in a dispute over a debt allegedly owed by Amidzich to Mrs. Papia. Amidzich's wrists were never broken however.

Enea said Thursday that it was common knowledge that he did not like Amidzich.

"Good Cook"

He said that when Amidzich, 32, was employed at the steak house at 1028 E. Juneau Ave., he was the chef's boss. "I didn't like him (Amidzich), but he was there, and he was a good cook," Enea said. "So I tolerated him."

Enea said he disliked Amidzich because Amidzich "was arrogant and thought he was the reason for the success of Sally's Steak House." Enea said he had once told Mrs. Papia, who owns the restaurant, to fire Amidzich.

"He (Amidzich) was continually in trouble with his finances," Enea said. "He was like a little baby."

Enea said that when Amidzich left Sally's to become a partner in the Northbrook Inn, "It didn't bother me at all. I would just as soon have gotten rid of him a couple of years prior."

Banned From Sally's

Enea testified that he had also told another defendant, Joseph V. Basile, to keep Schlechter and his friends out of Sally's Steak House.

Wednesday, Basile, 35, told the court that he was not involved in alleged threats to break Amidzich's wrists and that he had not hired Schlechter, an unindicted co-conspirator.

tor, to set fire to the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St.

Schlechter had testified that he set the inn on fire on Dec. 30, 1974, on orders from Basile.

Basile said Wednesday that he first learned of the fire from Schlechter. He added that Schlechter told him in the presence of Frank Salardino, 30, a former employee of Basile's that he (Schlechter) set the fire.

"He (Schlechter) said, 'I torched the place last night; and Salardino said, 'Look, I don't know you, what are you talking crazy for,'" Basile told the court. He said that he became afraid of Schlechter after that because he thought that Schlechter might think he (Basile) was telling others that Schlechter set the fire.

He said he then began telling lies to Schlechter in an effort to placate him.

"I was trying to build up his confidence in me and trying to make him think that other people than just me knew about the fire," he said. "I did not want him to think that I was the one who squealed on him, and that I was still an allright guy."

He said he did not know that Schlechter was a government informer or that Schlechter was wearing a concealed tape recorder in conversations with Basile.

He said he lied when he told Schlechter that he had been "scooped up" and beaten after having taken the blame for setting the fire.

He said he also lied to Schlechter when he told him that he had phoned Frank Buccieri, 56, brother of one of Chicago's late top syndicate bosses, in an effort to get bail money for Schlechter.

Basile Says He Didn't Order Fire

By ALIDA JOHNS

Joseph Vincent Basile testified Wednesday in Federal Court that he had not ordered that the Northbrook Inn be burned and that he was not involved in a plan to break the wrists of a former chef at Sally's Steak House.

Basile said he made up a story—contained in a tape recorded conversation—about Frank Bal, which he said meant Frank Balistreri, "scooping him with pistols." Balistreri was not identified further in testimony.

Basile, represented by Atty. Joseph P. Balistreri, was testifying about a conversation with Jacob John Schlechter, who was wearing a body recorder at the time. The jury has heard their taped conversation.

Schlechter, an unindicted co-conspirator and government witness, testified that on orders from Basile, he set the Dec. 30 fire at the inn where the former chef, Kurt B. Amidzich, was in business.

Schlechter also had testified he planned to break Amidzich's wrists with a baseball bat.

Basile; Mrs. Sally Papia, operator of Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave.; Russell J.

Enea; Maximillion J. Adonis, and James R. Romaro are being tried on charges involving an alleged extortion plot against Amidzich.

Basile also testified: He feared Schlechter and was afraid for his life; he told Schlechter about being "scooped up" to let him know "other people besides me know about the fire."

Basile said he pretended to take the blame for arranging the fire because he told Balistreri he didn't like Amidzich.

Basile said he told Schlechter how he "called up the old man," Frank Buccieri, for bail money for Schlechter because it would "impress" Schlechter.

Buccieri, 56, of Chicago, is the brother of the late Fiore (Fifi) Buccieri, Chicago West Side syndicate boss. Frank Buccieri reportedly has been a frequent visitor to Milwaukee and reportedly was once engaged to marry Mrs. Papia.

But, Basile said, "not a nickel he (Buccieri) gave me (for bail money). I don't even know the man. . . . I was trying to put myself in a position where he (Schlechter) could still trust me and I was still his friend."

Basile said he was afraid Schlechter thought he was a "stool pigeon."

Basile denied threatening a bondsman with cutting off his toes if he didn't make bond for Schlechter.

Basile told the court Schlechter picked him up Dec. 30 to drive him to the airport for a flight to Denver where Basile operated the Sheridan Dinner House. He said he had more than $10,000 invested in the restaurant.

With them in the car was Frank Salardino, 30, formerly of Dousman, Basile's bartender at the restaurant.

Basile said Schlechter told them he "torched" the Northbrook Inn, but "never mentioned any names" in connection with the fire.

Basile, 35, told the court he had four children, was separated from his wife and lived with his parents at 1623 N. Jackson St.

He said he had been in the auto service business for 15 years, most recently with Anthony Pipito (a former dish washer at Sally's) at Publix Garage, a defunct business.

Buccieri's name also was mentioned in a stipulation read to the jury Wednesday.

The stipulation said if Richard Schmitz, a partner in the Northbrook Inn, were recalled to the witness stand he would testify that Amidzich after arriving at the scene of the fire said he was going to see Frank Buccieri of Chicago.

Before Amidzich left the inn, he telephoned Buccieri and then indicated he was going to see Buccieri, the stipulation said.

Amidzich said Buccieri was surprised about the fire and indicated that inquiries would be made and that Buccieri would find out who did it.

Adonnis Invokes Fifth At Sally Papia Trial

By ALIDA JOHNS.

Maximillion J. Adonnis, one of five defendants in a Federal Court conspiracy trial here, Tuesday invoked the Fifth Amendment on the ground his testimony might be self-incriminating.

Adonnis was called to testify by other defendants.

Three of the defendants — Mrs. Sally Papia, Russell J. Enea and Joseph V. Basile — were expected to take the witness stand Wednesday as the defense continues putting on its case.

James R. Jennaro is the fifth defendant in the case involving an alleged extortion plot and a fire at the Northbrook Inn, where Mrs. Papia's former chef went to work.

Five Called

Atty. Franklyn M. Gimbel, representing Mrs. Papia, Tuesday called five witnesses. They were Thomas P. Schneider, a first assistant district attorney; Atty. James W. Dwyer, one of the operators of the Northbrook Inn; Arthur Schroeder, owner of the inn property at 960 N. 124th St.; Robert J. Richard, executive chef at Frenchy's Cafe, 1901 E. North Ave., and Richard McCormick, owner of the Grog Shoppe, 754 N. Front St.

Richard testified that in Mrs. Papia's restaurant, Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Jefferson Ave., he had heard Richard Schmitz talking to Enea about the former chef, Kurt E. Amidzich.

Richard said Schmitz, another partner in the inn and a government witness, wanted to know if Amidzich was at Sally's because "we want to break his head."

Enea said Amidzich was at Defense counsel told the other restaurant, where he court they had the right to cre then worked, according to doubt in the minds of the jurors about why the fire was started.

McCormick told the court about Herbert H. Holland, a defendant in the case who has pleaded guilty and testified for the government.

Quotes Holland

McCormick said he had heard Holland say of Mrs. Papia, "I'm going to get her."

Holland also said, "I'll show those — (Italian)s who's boss," according to McCormick.

On cross examination by David B. Bukey, an assistant US attorney, McCormick said he had pleaded guilty in state court two weeks ago to charge of possession of stolen property. The property was a boat, motor and trailer he purchased a year ago in July from Holland.

McCormick said he gave money to Holland to buy a machine gun but he didn't get the weapon.

"You don't say 'no' to someone like Herbie," McCormick said, "He's an animal . . . I've seen him beat people . . . know Herbie. I know what he's like. I don't think I could sleep at night if I didn't say something."

Testifies on Plea

Schneider testified as to conversations about plea bargaining on the state charge against Holland and Schlechter. Schlechter has admitted setting the inn on fire. He also has testified that he and Holland intended to break Amidzich's wrists with a baseball bat.

Papia Case

Acquittal

For Jennaro

Charges involving an alleged conspiracy and extortion plot were dismissed Monday in Federal Court against James R. Jennaro, one of five defendants in the case.

Judge John W. Reynolds ordered a judgment of acquittal entered in favor of Jennaro, 45, of 1570 N. Prospect Ave.

Reynolds said the "evidence did not indicate that his (Jennaro's) knowledge of the alleged conspiracy was such as to justify keeping him in the case."

Jennaro's attorney, Richard E. Reilly, had argued that the government's case against his client consisted of three words, "Yes, he'd better."

Richard Schmitz, one of the partners at the Northbrook Inn, testified Jennaro made that remark when he visited the inn with Mrs. Sally Papia and Russell J. Enea. Schmitz said Mrs. Papia told him that Kurt Amidzich, her former chef, should pay her the money he owed her.

Reynolds also dismissed the second count of the federal grand jury indictment in the case. The count, dealing with interference with commerce by threats or violence, named Jennaro and Mrs. Papia, 43, operator of Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave.

The first count charges the defendants, Mrs. Papia, Enea, Joseph V. Basile, 35, of 1623 N. Jackson St., and Maximillion J. Adonnis, 40, who is serving an eight year sentence at the State Prison at Waupun, with conspiracy to collect payments of credit through extortionate means.

The third count charges Mrs. Papia with collection of extension of credit by extortionate means.

Lawyers for the government and the defendants will start closing arguments Tuesday. The case is expected to go to the jury Wednesday.

Papia Judge Dismisses Charges Against Jennaro

Charges against James R. Jennaro, 45, a defendant in the federal extortion trial of Sally Papia and three others, were dismissed Monday.

The case against Jennaro, of 1570 N. Prospect Ave., was dismissed after Federal Judge John W. Reynolds ruled that the government had not presented enough evidence to convict Jennaro.

Jennaro's attorney, Richard E. Reilly, had argued that the government's case against Jennaro hinged on three words.

Jennaro allegedly said, "Yes, you'd better," to Richard Schmitz, a partner at the Northbrook Inn, after Mrs. Papia allegedly told Schmitz in October, 1974, that he should pay her the money owed to her by Kurt Amidzich, 32, a former chef at her restaurant and a partner at the Northbrook Inn.

The government had admitted in court that there was less evidence against Jennaro than the other defendants.

Reynolds also dismissed one count of a three count indictment against the defendants. It alleged that Jennaro and Mrs. Papia had interfered with interstate commerce between the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St., and businesses outside Wisconsin by threatening to burn the restaurant down.

All of the defendants are named in one count of the indictment that alleges a co-conspiracy to illegally collect the money owed by Amidzich.

The third count of the indictment alleges that Mrs. Papia attempted to collect the money through extortion.

The trial, now in its fifth week, is expected to end this week. Government and defense attorneys rested their cases Monday, and closing arguments were to begin Tuesday. The case is expected to go to the jury by Wednesday.

Final Arguments Made in Papia Case

By ALIDA JOHNS.

Final arguments were presented Tuesday in the Federal Court jury trial of Sally Papia and three others charged in an alleged extortion plot.

Thomas E. Brown, an assistant US attorney gave the summation for the government, and Atty. Franklyn M. Gimbel, representing Mrs. Papia, a restaurant owner, made a closing statement for his client.

Intimidation, Fear Charged By Prosecutor

Brown told the jury:

"What the case is all about is at the foundation of our society. We are a country ruled by courts and law. We rely on the courts to settle differences so we can live in this society without fear."

Mrs. Papia and her co-conspirators did not come into court to resolve a dispute over money. They "relied on fear and intimidation — ski masks and baseball bats."

His reference was to testimony that John Jacob Schlechter, an unindicted co-conspirator, and Herbert H. Holland, a defendant who had pleaded guilty, were going to break Kurt B. Amidzich's wrists with the bat.

Brown said Mrs. Papia visited the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St., and told one of the partners, Richard Schmitz, "You stole my chef . . . you should show more respect. People have gotten hurt by not showing respect. You could come out here some morning and the place could be burned down."

Amidzich, her former chef, wrote a letter to Mrs. Papia saying she had "leaned on Dick (Schmitz) pretty hard," and Amidzich would "appreciate it if you would call off the muscle."

Amidzich closed the letter by writing, "Contact my lawyer."

Brown said Mrs. Papia "tore up the letter and threw it away."

The inn had not put Mrs. Papia out of business, Brown said. It was out of "pure vengeance" she went out to put muscle on Schmitz."

Money wasn't really important to a woman with a $1 million a year business, Brown said.

Brown described Mrs. Papia as the "principal actress" in the conspiracy.

He said the government takes the position that Amidzich's car, taken by Mrs. Papia, was stolen.

In addition to Mrs. Papia, operator of Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Junéau Ave., defendants are Joseph V. Basile, Maximilian J. Adonnis and Russell J. Enea.

The four are charged with conspiracy in connection with the collection of a debt owed to Mrs. Papia by her former chef who left her employ to become a partner in the Northbrook Inn.

A summary of the arguments:

Brown said that when Amidzich was told, "Pay what you owe" to get back his own car, "That's extortion."

"She acted twice," Brown continued, "and frustrated now, new actors come in — the coconspirators, Basile, Adonnis and Enea."

Schlechter is not a "pretty man," Brown said, but when you decide to burn an inn and break wrists, "you don't hire an Eagle Scout. You hire a thug."

"A contract was let for $500 each (to Schlechter and Holland) to cripple a man for the rest of his life," Brown said.

Schlechter's wife, Phyllis, testified her husband told her that bones in Amidzich's wrists were going to be turned to dust.

Brown said the jurors had a "unique opportunity" to "listen to the conspiracy" through the tapes of conversations Schlechter had with Adonnis, Basile and Enea while wearing a body recorder.

Mrs. Papia Described As Target

Gimbel said:

His client, Mrs. Papia, was not to be judged by the "jungle b e a s t s" (referring to Schlechter and Holland) or the FBI or the State Justice Department, but by 12 of her peers.

He said she should not be judged by evidence that fits into a scenario, using a word Brown had used, but by the facts.

"Someone steals our property, and we call the police," Gimbel continued. "The victim goes to the police, and the police look for the criminal."

However, in this case, he said, first the target for the prosecution, Mrs. Papia, was found and then the crime was found.

In doing so, he continued, the rights of a number of people were trampled on and "we are offended by that."

Gimbel said the police knew last Jan. 1 about Schlechter's setting the Dec. 30 fire at the inn, because his wife, Phyllis, told them. They didn't arrest Schlechter, Gimbel said, because they wanted to know why he started it.

"The police were sitting in the passenger seat of this vehicle of conspiracy," Gimbel said. Police were watching every move of Schlechter and others he contended.

"They were looking to get Sally Papia. They heard her name mentioned. She has a successful restaurant. It would make headlines," Gimbel said.

Gimbel said he wanted to present evidence of what Mrs. Papia did.

He said she talked to Schmitz on Oct. 21, 1974, about Amidzich's debt. Mrs. Papia said to pay her $100 a month, $10 a week or $1 a week, Gimbel said. "Could Schmitz have bought protection for $1 a week?" Gimbel asked.

The Northbrook Inn was losing $1,200 a week, he said, "a good reason for a friendly fire."

"Did he (Amidzich) participate in the destruction of a dream (the inn) in more ways than financial?" Gimbel asked.

He said if Schmitz's testimony was true that he was frightened by the visit to the inn by Mrs. Papia and others, Schmitz must have been "terrified" when he went to Sally's at the end of January looking for Amidzich.

Gimbel said it was true that Mrs. Papia had taken Amidzich's car, but she "didn't play cat and mouse. She called him up and told him she had the car."

He said Amidzich wouldn't testify that he had signed a promissory note to Mrs. Papia because it "reflected poorly" on him to borrow money from her when he was going to leave her restaurant.

When Amidzich was interviewed by a state fire marshal, Gimbel said, he denied there were any threats against him or the business and said he didn't know who started the fire.

Gimbel said Schmitz had left a $4,500 gambling marker in Las Vegas and could have had more concern about extortion from that than from Mrs. Papia.

The "crowning act of desperation by the prosecutors," Gimbel said, was bringing Raymond C. Stoeckle (Mark Gary) to testify.

Stoeckle, serving a term in the state prison at Waupun, testified Mrs. Papia had offered him $5,000 to kill Amidzich and Schmitz.

Gimbel called Stoeckle a lying, cheating, conniving sewer rat of the worst kind."

Gimbel said to allege these "disgusting acts" against Mrs. Papia was "absolutely incredible." He cited the allegation of her having a role in "maiming a person she treated as a child for seven years."

Jury Still Out in Papia Case

The jury was still out Thursday morning in the Federal Court trial of Sally Papia, 43, owner of Sally's Steak House at 1028 E. Juneau Ave., and three other persons allegedly involved in an extortion plot.

Federal Judge John W. Reynolds said the jury would deliberate from 9:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. daily until a verdict was reached. A verdict is expected Friday or Saturday.

The jury which began deliberations at 5:10 p.m. Wednesday after Reynolds presented jury instructions that lasted nearly two hours.

Reynolds told the jury that "there may be no conspiracy, one conspiracy or even two conspiracies." He said it was for the jury to decide whether the fire at the Northbrook Inn last December constituted one conspiracy and the alleged threats to Kurt Amidzich constituted a separate conspiracy.

Loans at Issue

The trial, which started nearly five weeks ago, involves an alleged conspiracy to collect loans made by Mrs. Papia to Amidzich, 32, a former chef at Sally's Steak House.

When Amidzich quit as chef in October, 1974, and went to work as a partner in the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St., he failed to repay the loans and was allegedly threatened, and the inn was set on fire.

Wednesday defense attorneys ended their closing arguments and a government attorney presented rebuttal.

Thomas P. Doherty, representing defendant Maximillion J. Adonis, 40, said Adonis had nothing to do with the fire or with threats to break Amidzich's wrists.

Lies Charged

He said some of the government's witnesses had lied in court because "the government isn't always right and their motives aren't always straight down the line as we might think."

Gerald P. Boyle, representing defendant Russell J. Enea, 34, said the government had failed to call in 27 additional witnesses that could have given support to the witnesses who were called. He presented a list of 34 questions that he said had not been answered by government witnesses.

Thomas E. Brown, an assistant US attorney and prosecutor in the case, told the jury:

"This isn't a 34 question game. The government has the obligation to present a credible case to you and not an exercise in presenting witnesses for the next three months."

Brown accused the defense of trying to make the government look like the bad guys because "when you don't have anything else you try the government."

"The desperation that you saw in this courtroom was not by the government," Brown said. "It was the desperation of the defense."

Testimony Backed in Papia Trial

Three defense witnesses in the federal extortion trial of Sally Papia and four others testified in court Monday that convicted armed robber Raymond C. Stoeckle told them that Mrs. Papia hired him to kill her former chef.

Thomas Schneider, an assistant county district attorney; Geir Magnesen, a special agent for the FBI, and Douglas Bottoni, a Milwaukee detective lieutenant, told the court that Stoeckle was interviewed by them on May 21, and he said Mrs. Papia on April 25 had offered him $5,000 to kill Kurt Amidzich.

Schneider and Magnesen said Stoeckle also told them that Mrs. Papia had hired him to kill Amidzich's business partner, Richard Schmitz.

Bottoni, however, said Stoeckle did not mention Schmitz to him.

The defense called the three witnesses Monday, after testimony Saturday by Stoeckle (also known as Mark Gary) that Mrs. Papia had attempted to hire him.

The trial, which began its fifth week Monday and is expected to end this week, involves the alleged efforts by Mrs. Papia and four others to collect money owed her by Amidzich.

Jury Ponders Papia Charges

By ALIDA JOHNS

The case of restaurant owner Sally Papia and three others charged in an alleged extortion plot went to the jury shortly after 5 p.m. Wednesday.

By 10 p.m. the jury had recessed and was taken by bus to a motel for the night.

The trial started Nov. 17 before Federal Judge John W. Reynolds. He said the jury would deliberate from 9:30 a.m. to about 9:30 p.m. until a verdict was reached.

Before the jury of seven women and five men started deliberation, they heard final arguments from three defense lawyers.

They were Atty. Joseph P. Ballistrieri, representing Joseph V. Basile; Atty. Thomas P. Doherty, representing Maxi-million J. Adonis, and Atty. Gerald P. Boyle, representing Russell J. Enea.

Boyle's summation consisted mainly of a number of questions. He asked where 27 persons were, indicating he wanted to know why they hadn't been called as government witnesses.

Boyle also asked 34 questions that he said had gone unanswered in the case.

"This isn't a 34 question game," Thomas E. Brown, an assistant US attorney, said in rebuttal.

Brown said the persons named by Boyle were just as available to be called as witnesses by the defense lawyers as by the government.

Mrs. Papia, operator of Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave., and the three men are charged with conspiracy to collect payments of credit through extortionate means and to punish for nonpayment.

Mrs. Papia also is charged with collection of extension of credit by extortionate means.

Instructions to the jury by Reynolds included one involving a defense theory that Mrs. Papia lawfully became a creditor of Kurt B. Amidzich, her former chef, because she and her corporation loaned him money.

The theory continues that Mrs. Papia talked to Richard Schmitz, a partner of Amidzich in the Northbrook Inn, at the request of Amidzich to make arrangements for the repayment of the debt.

"These facts . . . do not prove conspiracy to extort or attempted extortion. It is her contention that the debt was not repaid by Amidzich or the Northbrook Inn Corp."

"It is the contention of Mrs. Papia that she had no communication about her loans to Amidzich with any of the alleged co-conspirators, nor did she request . . . that there be a burning of the Northbrook Inn or an attempted beating of Amidzich."

"You are instructed that the government has the burden of proof beyond a reasonable doubt that there was a conspiracy to do these acts, and if you so find, the burden of proof rests entirely on the government as to whether or not Mrs. Papia was at any time a member of that conspiracy."

"If you believe the testimony of Mrs. Papia in this regard, then you must find her not guilty of count one (the conspiracy count)."

Mrs. Papia Denies Plot to Kill Chef

By ALIDA JOHNS

Mrs. Sally Papia denied Friday that she had offered $5,000 to a man to kill her former chef, Kurt B. Amidzich, and Richard Schmitz, his partner in the Northbrook Inn.

She was asked the question during cross examination by David B. Bukey, one of three assistant US attorneys prosecuting the case against Mrs. Papia and four others in Federal Court.

The question was asked in preparation for bringing Raymond C. Stoeckle, who also uses the name of Mark Gary, to testify as a government rebuttal witness on Saturday.

Judge John W. Reynolds cautioned the jury that he was admitting evidence on the matter only for "determining the consciousness of guilt of Mrs. Papia" and it was "not usable for the other defendants."

Attorneys for Mrs. Papia and the other defendants, James R. Jennaro, Russell J. Enea, Joseph V. Basile and Maximillion J. Adonis, had objected vehemently to admitting the matter.

Atty. Richard E. Reilly, representing Jennaro, said it was "inflammatory." Other lawyers said it was a smear against Mrs. Papia.

They questioned the credibility of the proposed witness.

Two court sessions were closed to the public while the matter of admission was argued.

Stoeckle, an inmate of the State Prison at Waupun, has been convicted of a number of armed robberies. He also has attempted to build a reputation as a "jailhouse lawyer."

In July, Stoeckle was sentenced to five years in Waupun after he pleaded guilty to charges of theft, practicing law without a license and operating a bill adjustment service without a license.

In the late 1960s, Stoeckle, while in the County Jail awaiting trial on armed robbery charges, wrote legal appeals and other documents by the dozens for himself and other prisoners.

Stoeckle and Adonis apparently know each other, federal sources say.

Bukey, in questioning Mrs. Papia, showed her a picture of Stoeckle and asked, "On April 25, 1975, did you offer Raymond Stoeckle, the man depicted in that picture, $5,000 to kill Kurt Amidzich and Richard Schmitz?"

"No, I did not," Mrs. Papia answered. She said she did not believe she had ever seen the man.

Meeting Questioned

Bukey asked if on the morning of April 25, she met any of the other defendants prior to going to state court. The five are charged in state court as well as in a federal court.

Mrs. Papia answered, "Jimmy (Jennaro) and Russell (Enea)."

She testified she had not seen Adonis that morning, nor had she gone to AFL Motors, Inc., where Adonis worked.

When questioned by her lawyer, Franklyn M. Gimbel, Mrs. Papia said she had never asked any of the defendants, including Adonis, to get her a legal opinion about the case against her.

"You didn't look for curbstone legal advice from other lawyers you might know, or any other people you knew?" Gimbel asked.

"No, I didn't," she answered.

Credibility Eyed

Earlier in the government's questioning of Mrs. Papia, Bukey and Reynolds exchanged words over the court's treatment of Mrs. Papia.

questions as to her credibility, asked Mrs. Papia: "You would not have someone as a corporate vice president unless that person was performing some sort of function?"

She testified that was correct.

Then Bukey pointed out that Frank Trovato's name was listed on the liquor license application of her restaurant, Sally's Steak House, for 1974, while Trovato was operating the Riverside Inn, Riverside, Ill., at that time.

Reynolds told Bukey:

"The inference you're trying to create is that she swore falsely under oath when she applied for the liquor license when she listed someone as corporate vice president who is just a nominal name. I don't think that really follows."

Reynolds said he wanted to move on to "something that has relevance" and asked Bukey if he agreed.

"I don't agree at all," Bukey said. "The defendant has taken the stand and has to be treated like any other witness. They (the defense attorneys) went through every document in the world with Mr. Amidzich trying to impeach his testimony."

Drove to Inn

Later, Bukey questioned Mrs. Papia about the night she went to the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St., and took Amidzich's car.

"I had my father drive me," Mrs. Papia said.

"Isn't it a fact that you went out there with Max Adomnis?" Bukey asked.

Mrs. Papia answered no and then Bukey asked if she ever told anyone she had gone to the inn on Nov. 30, 1974, with Adomnis.

"It seems to me when Mr. (Herbert) Krusche (of the State Justice Department's Division of Criminal Investigation) called me and said, 'Sally, who drove you out there?' I didn't want to tell him it was my father because . . . I didn't want to get him involved in my personal problems, and I may have mentioned Maxie's name," she said.

"So you may have lied to Mr. Krusche?" Bukey asked.

Gimbel objected to the question as being argumentative and Bukey said it was fair cross examination.

"It's the same as other witnesses," he told Reynolds.

Reynolds told Bukey, "You know, I'm interested in why you keep emphasizing that. You feel as though I'm not treating her like any other witness?"

"You say she should be treated like any other witness, and the inference being that the court is not treating her like any other witness. And if you believe that, I want that to be reflected in the record," Reynolds continued.

Right Limited

Bukey responded "I believe that we have not been given the same right of cross examination as the defendants enjoyed with Mr. Schmitz and Mr. Amidzich."

Trovato's name came up again during the trial when Bukey attempted to bring out the fact that his restaurant in Illinois had burned in April, 1974. Bukey also tried to raise questions about the fire that occurred in Mrs. Papia's restaurant when it was located on N. 5th St. and W. Michigan Ave. in 1967.

Reynolds said those issues were "pretty far removed" from the issues on trial.

Convict Says Mrs. Papia Offered Contract on Chef

By Monroe Walker
of The Journal Staff

A convicted armed robber testified in Federal Court Saturday that Sally Papia offered him $5,000 to kill her former chef and the chef's business partner.

Raymond C. Stoeckle (also known as Mark Gary), 45, told the court that Mrs. Papia tried to hire him three days after she was indicted on extortion charges to kill Kurt Amidzich, 32, and Richard G. Schmitz, 42, both partners in the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St.

Mrs. Papia testified Friday that she had not hired Stoeckle to kill Amidzich. Mrs. Papia said that she did not know Stoeckle and did not believe she had ever seen him before.

Defense attorneys in the arson and extortion trial of Mrs. Papia, 43, owner of Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave., and four others argued that Stoeckle's testimony should not be admitted into evidence because it was inflammatory and only served to damage Mrs. Papia's reputation.

Questioned Closely

Stoeckle was questioned extensively by defense attorneys Saturday in efforts to discredit his testimony. Defense attorneys are expected to present witnesses Monday who will testify that Stoeckle is not a reliable and trustworthy witness.

Att. Thomas P. Doherty, representing defendant Maximilian J. Adonis, 40, argued that the government should have put Stoeckle on the witness stand as a regular witness and not as a "blockbuster" rebuttal witness.

The government contended that Stoeckle was not a surprise witness and that the defense had known that he might testify since before the trial began four weeks ago.

According to the government, Stoeckle was not called to testify earlier because the government wanted to hear Mrs. Papia's testimony before deciding whether to call Stoeckle.

Stoeckle was called in rebuttal to Mrs. Papia's testimony that she knew nothing about any alleged threats to Amidzich, the government said.

Call From Adonis

Stoeckle, who was questioned Saturday by Thomas Brown, an assistant US attorney and a prosecutor in the trial, told the court that he got a telephone call from Adonis on April 24, 1975, and went the next day to AFL Motors, 1910 W. North Ave., where Adonis was then employed as service manager.

"He (Adonis) gave me a legal document to look at," Stoeckle testified. "It was a criminal complaint from Circuit Court."

Adonis, Mrs. Papia and others were charged on April 22 in Circuit Court with arson and extortion connected with alleged attempts to collect money owed to Mrs. Papia by Amidzich.

When Amidzich quit as chef at her restaurant in October, 1974, and went to work as a partner at the Northbrook Inn, without paying Mrs. Papia the money he allegedly owed, Amidzich was allegedly threatened and the inn was set on fire.

Read Complaint

Stoeckle said in court Saturday that Adonis asked him to go outside and as they were walking out of the AFL Motors building, Stoeckle saw Mrs. Papia coming into the building.

Stoeckle said Mrs. Papia walked with him and Adonis to a car and they got in. He said he finished reading the criminal complaint and told them that it appeared to present good cases against both of them but that "they had a stronger case against Adonis than against Mrs. Papia."

He said Mrs. Papia was upset and said, "I'm not going to go through all this. Something has to be done about Amidzich and Schmitz."

Stoeckle said he did not know what Mrs. Papia was talking about and Adonis told him that she "gave Amidzich $5,000 to buy a car and he had invested it in a business."

$5,000 Offer

He testified that Mrs. Papia said, "I want to get rid of them (Amidzich and Schmitz)."

"I said I still didn't understand," Stoeckle told the court. "She said I'll give you the same $5,000 if you kill them."

"I said it was something I'd have to decide on. I'd have to give some thought to it."

He said he was arrested on other charges on May 8 and was never able to contact Mrs. Papia about the alleged offer.

The arrest was for theft, practicing law without a license and operating a bill adjustment service without a license. He pleaded guilty to the charges and is serving a five year sentence at the State Prison at Waupun. He said he had not made a deal with the government to be paroled in exchange for his testimony.

Mrs. Papia Denies Threats

on Chef

By ALIDA JOHNS

Mrs. Sally A. Papia, dressed in black and speaking softly, testified Thursday in Federal Court that Kurt B. Amidzich told her she had been like a mother to him.

Amidzich, a chef who left Mrs. Papia's restaurant to become a partner in the Northbrook Inn, is the central figure in the alleged extortion plot in which Mrs. Papia and four others are charged.

Mrs. Papia, 43, owner of Sally's Steak House, was questioned by her lawyer, Franklin M. Gimmel. She said she had never asked anyone to break Amidzich's wrists or to intimidate or scare him or to light a fire at the inn.

She said she had no ill feeling against him and in fact she wanted him to "prosper" so she could "collect" the money he owed her.

She said she did not know Jacob John Schlechter, an unindicted co-conspirator who has testified that he started the fire at the inn last Dec. 30 on orders from Joseph V. Basile, another defendant in the case.

Mrs. Papia also said she did not know Herbert H. Holland, a defendant in the case who has pleaded guilty. Holland and Schlechter have testified that they intended to break Amidzich's wrists with a baseball bat.

Schlechter also testified he was told by Russell J. Enea, another defendant and general manager at Sally's: "I want you to bust Kurt's wrists so he'll never cook again."

Mrs. Papia testified:

She started the restaurant almost 14 years ago at N. 5th St. and W. Michigan Ave. with eight employees. At the present location, 1028 E. Juneau Ave., there are 55 employees with a weekly payroll of about $6,000. The restaurant grossed early $1 million in 1974.

She met Amidzich about seven years ago when he applied for a job and she hired him "as an assistant to myself and another cook in the kitchen."

When Amidzich left Sally's, he was making $30,000 a year, she said.

Mrs. Papia said that Amidzich told her "he realized I was like a mother to him, but this (the Northbrook Inn) was such a great opportunity, he couldn't pass it up."

She told how Amidzich "never had enough money" and she attempted to help him straighten out his finances.

Troubled Health

But she said in 1974 she was "in-and-out of the hospital" for a hysterectomy and a blood clot between her heart and lung and she "couldn't take it any more — all his gambling habits, gambling debts."

When she came out of the hospital, she said, a friend, Herbert Krusche, of the State Justice Department's Division of Criminal Investigation, and his wife and daughter, came to her home at 2880 N. Menomonee River Pkwy. to visit her.

Mrs. Papia said that she had loaned Amidzich $2,200 to pay federal income taxes in 1974, and he signed a promissory note.

She said she co-signed a car loan and knew if the $393 monthly payment was not made she was responsible for it.

After Amidzich left her restaurant, she said she learned he was going to trade in the car. Mrs. Papia said she had her father drive her out to the Northbrook Inn.

"I took it upon myself to take his car," she related. She said she telephoned Amidzich and told him "at least sit down with me and discuss the money you owe me."

She said the car was returned to Amidzich a few days later.

Mrs. Papia testified that she had been advised by Krusche "that Kurt had called him and that maybe it would be best if I would return the car and just turn everything over to my attorneys and let my attorneys handle it."

When Mrs. Papia, Enea and James R. Jennaro, another defendant, visited the Northbrook Inn when it opened, she testified she did not discuss fire or physical threats with Richard Schmitz, a partner in the inn and a government witness.

"Was Mr. Schmitz uneasy?" Gimmel questioned.

"Not really," Mrs. Papia answered. "Every drink we bought him, he drank."

Not Informed.

Mrs. Papia said she asked Schmitz why he hadn't told her about starting the Northbrook Inn. She said Schmitz had been in her restaurant almost daily the previous month.

Schmitz answered that he thought that Amidzich had told her:

Mrs. Papia told the court the Milwaukee police came to her and told her "we have to give you protective custody."

"I didn't feel I needed any," she said. "I never asked for any."

Mrs. Papia said she wasn't afraid but the "lieutenant of police said a witness confessed my life was in danger," so she has protection seven days a week, 24 hours a day. "I don't think they come in the courtroom," she added. "I'm safe in here."

She talked about last New Year's Eve and described how her whole family — parents, grandparents, aunts and uncles — came to her restaurant and worked until almost 3 a.m. Then, she said, they were invited to Trovato's, 1550 N. Barwell Ave., for dinner because they hadn't had time to eat.

Frank Trovato, the restaurant owner, formerly was her chef, she said.

Mrs. Papia said she saw Amidzich when she first entered Trovato's and "he turned his back to me."

"Did you light a match?" Gimbel asked.

"No, I don't smoke. I have no reason to carry matches," she answered.

"Do you light any candles (in church)?" Gimbel questioned.

"Yes, I've lighted many of them," she responded.

Celebrity Status

When Atty. Joseph P. Balistrieri, representing Basile, started questioning Mrs. Papia, she remarked, "I used to be your babysitter."

"Isn't it a fact that you are something of a personality in this city?" Balistrieri asked.

"Well, that's what they say," she answered.

"All right. Haven't you in the last four or five years entertained such people as Milton Berle, Frank Sinatra, Corbett Monica, Buddy Greco, James Darren, Cesar Romero, Margaret Whiting, Melvin Belli, Tony Martin, Johnny Desmond. Haven't all those people come to see you at your restaurant?" Balistrieri asked.

"Yes, they have," she answered.

"These people you entertain, is that correct?" he asked.

"I have cooked for them, yes," she said.

"When they come in, you cook yourself?" Balistrieri asked.

"Yes, I would," Mrs. Papia responded.

Disliked Amidzich

Enea testified earlier Thursday. He said he had never liked Amidzich, had caught him cheating but that Amidzich was a good cook.

Enea said he would not do anything illegal against Amidzich. "I have a wife and three children I wouldn't jeopardize," he said.

He said he had confronted Amidzich at the Towne Room East at the Milwaukee Inn and wanted to fight with him, because Amidzich had been "bad mouthing me, (and) Sally."

Enea testified when Schlechter offered to take care of Amidzich for him, Enea told Schlechter, "Mind your own business. Stay out of my business."

Cross examination of Mrs. Papia will continue Friday.

Mrs. Papia— Denies Arson

By Monroe Walker
of The Journal Staff

Sally Papia, 43, owner of Sally's Steak House, testified in Federal Court Friday that she had never asked any other defendants in the case or hired anyone to set fire to the Northbrook Inn or to break a chef's wrists.

Mrs. Papia and four others are charged with conspiracy to extort money from the chef, Kurt Amidzich, who used to work in her restaurant and now is an owner of the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St.

She said she had never seen Jacob John Schlechter, an indicted co-conspirator, in her restaurant and had never talked with Schlechter or Herbert Holland, 32, a former massage parlor operator.

Denies Accusation

Schlechter has testified that he set fire to the inn on Dec. 30, 1974, as ordered by defendant Joseph V. Basile, 35. Basile has denied in court that he hired Schlechter to set the fire.

Schlechter has also told the court that defendants Russell J. Enea, 34, and Maximillion J. Adonis, 40, hired him and Holland to break Amidzich's wrists. (Amidzich's wrists were not broken). Enea, a manager at Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave., has denied that he hired Schlechter or Holland. Adonis has pleaded the Fifth Amendment and refused to testify.

Mrs. Papia testified Thursday that she did not know Basile but that Adonis has worked in her restaurant as maitre d' "about four or five years ago."

She said that Amidzich worked as a cook in her restaurant about six years ago and that "after he was with me a year or two, he and his wife had a lot of financial problems."

She said she suggested that Amidzich let her handle his financial affairs "because he was moving from place to place because he couldn't pay rent and sometimes didn't have money for food."

She testified that Amidzich had considerable gambling debts and that "he was very nervous when he had problems like that, and couldn't perform well in the kitchen."

Mrs. Papia said Enea had once talked to her about firing Amidzich "because of his temper tantrums, and told him that I was really the boss and I make the decisions; in essence, I thought he (Amidzich) was doing a good job."

She said she loaned Amidzich money to pay his taxes and also to buy a new car. When he quit his job at Sally's to become a partner in the Northbrook Inn in October, 1974, he still owed her money, she said, but had made no effort to pay.

"I wasn't upset that he was leaving; I was just upset about the way he went about it," she said. "He gave me a 10-day notice." She added that he continued to borrow money from her even though he apparently knew he was leaving.

She said Amidzich told her he would pay her before he left but later told her that his business partners would pay.

Mrs. Papia testified Friday that she knew she was not legally entitled to Amidzich's car, even though she was legally responsible for the debt.

Mrs. Papia, who was being questioned by David B. Bukey, an assistant US attorney, said she had co-signed for Amidzich's 1973 Cadillac in September, 1973.

She said she knew that the $393 monthly payment would have to come out of Amidzich's checks, which were $500 weekly, but "I would make his car payments ahead of time because normally there was never enough money to pay for it."

Mrs. Papia testified that Amidzich spent so much money each week that she had to consider the car payments as additional salary. She said he made the payments because she wanted to keep her credit rating good.

On Oct. 21, 1974, about one week after the inn opened, Mrs. Papia, Enea and another defendant, James R. Jennarp, 45, visited the inn.

Mrs. Papia testified that she asked Richard Schmitz, a business partner at the Northbrook Inn, what arrangements Amidzich had made to pay her.

"He was surprised," she said. "Kurt had never told him about the money he owed me."

She said she never had threatened Schmitz.

Schmitz, who testified as a government witness earlier, told the court that Mrs. Papia had threatened that the restaurant might be burned down.

Mrs. Papia said Thursday that she asked Schmitz why he had not told her he was opening the restaurant with Amidzich. She said Schmitz told her that he thought Amidzich had told her.

She said she quoted one of her favorite sayings to Schmitz: "That was that on this Earth, to get respect and consideration, you have to earn them; what goes around, comes around; whatever you give, that's what you receive."

Mrs. Papia testified that she learned that Amidzich was going to trade in the car for which she had co-signed. She said she went to the Northbrook Inn and took the car.

She said she later returned the car after talking with her attorney and a friend, Herbert Krusche, of the State Justice Department's Criminal Investigation Division.

She said Krusche visited her, with his wife and daughter, at her home, 2880 N. Menomonee River Pkwy., and had advised her to return the car and let her attorney handle the matter.

Krusche said Friday in a telephone interview that all of his contacts with Mrs. Papia, including the visit to her home, were related to official business. He declined to comment further because the trial is in progress.

Mrs. Papia also testified that she did not strike a match in the presence of Amidzich and tell him she had warned that the Northbrook would be burned.

"I don't smoke and I have no reason to carry matches," she said.

"Do you light any candles?" asked Franklyn M. Gimpel, her attorney.

"Yes, I've lighted many of them," she said.

She said she had been protected by the Milwaukee Police Department because of alleged threat on her life, but did not feel the protection was necessary.

Basile Says He Didn't Order Fire

By ALIDA JOHNS

Joseph Vincent Basile testified Wednesday in Federal Court that he had not ordered that the Northbrook Inn be burned and that he was not involved in a plan to break the wrists of a former chef at Sally's Steak House.

Basile said he made up a story—contained in a tape recorded conversation—about Frank Bal, which he said meant Frank Balistreri, "scooping him with pistols." Balistreri was not identified further in testimony.

Basile, represented by Atty. Joseph P. Balistreri, was testifying about a conversation with Jacob John Schlechter, who was wearing a body recorder at the time. The jury has heard their taped conversation.

Schlechter, an unindicted co-conspirator and government witness, testified that on orders from Basile, he set the Dec. 30 fire at the inn where the former chef, Kurt B. Amidzich, was in business.

Schlechter also had testified he planned to break Amidzich's wrists with a baseball bat.

Basile; Mrs. Sally Papia, operator of Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave.; Russell J. Enea; Maximillion J. Adonnis, and James R. Jennaro are being tried on charges involving an alleged extortion plot against Amidzich.

Basile also testified: He feared Schlechter and was afraid for his life; he told Schlechter about being "scooped up" to let him know "other people besides me know about the fire."

Basile said he pretended to take the blame for arranging the fire because he told Balistreri he didn't like Amidzich.

Basile said he told Schlechter how he "called up the old man," Frank Buccieri, for bail money for Schlechter because it would "impress" Schlechter.

Buccieri, 56, of Chicago, is the brother of the late Fidre (Fifi) Buccieri, Chicago West Side syndicate boss. Frank Buccieri reportedly has been a frequent visitor to Milwaukee and reportedly was once engaged to marry Mrs. Papia.

But, Basile said, "not a nickel he (Buccieri) gave me (for bail money). I don't even know the man. . . . I was trying to put myself in a position where he (Schlechter) could still trust me and I was still his friend."

Basile said he was afraid Schlechter thought he was a "stool pigeon."

Basile denied threatening a bondsman with cutting off his toes if he didn't make bond for Schlechter.

Basile told the court Schlechter picked him up Dec. 30 to drive him to the airport for a flight to Denver where Basile operated the Sheridan Dinner House. He said he had more than $10,000 invested in the restaurant.

With them in the car was Frank Salardino, 30, formerly of Dousman, Basile's bartender at the restaurant.

Basile said Schlechter told them he "torched" the Northbrook Inn, but "never mentioned any names" in connection with the fire.

Basile, 35, told the court he had four children, was separated from his wife and lived with his parents at 1623 N. Jackson St.

He said he had been in the auto service business for 15 years, most recently with Anthony Pipito (a former dishwasher at Sally's) at Publix Garage, a defunct business.

Buccieri's name also was mentioned in a stipulation read to the jury Wednesday.

The stipulation said if Richard Schmitz, a partner in the Northbrook Inn, were recalled to the witness stand he would testify that Amidzich after arriving at the scene of the fire said he was going to see Frank Buccieri of Chicago.

Before Amidzich left the inn, he telephoned Buccieri and then indicated he was going to see Buccieri, the stipulation said.

Amidzich said Buccieri was surprised about the fire and indicated that inquiries would be made and that Buccieri would find out who did it.

City to Rule on Cutting Mrs. Papia's License Ties

By RON MAROSE

City officials said Monday that they were trying to determine when Mrs. Sally Papia, found guilty of extortion last Friday, should be removed as an officer of the corporation that holds the tavern license for her restaurant.

Mrs. Papia, 43, was found guilty by a federal court jury of extortion in connection with threats against a former chef who owed her money.

Three other defendants were found guilty of conspiracy to commit extortion.

Mrs. Papia, of 2880 N. Menomonee River Pkwy., is secretary and treasurer of Sally's Steak House & Cocktail Lounge, Inc., 1028 E. Juneau Ave.

Opinion Sought

According to city ordinance, no license shall be granted to any person convicted of a felony. This applies to all officers and directors of corporations which hold such licenses.

Ald. Clarence M. Miller,

chairman of the Common Council's Utilities and Licenses Committee, which grants tavern licenses, said he would seek an opinion from the city attorney's office as to when the corporation should be notified regarding the removal of Mrs. Papia as an officer.

There was some question among city officials on whether Mrs. Papia should be removed as a corporate officer upon conviction, sentencing, or when all appeals to higher courts have been exhausted.

The question was also raised as to whether Mrs. Papia might be able to remain as an officer until the license comes up for renewal next June because the ordinance involved refers only to the granting of a license.

It does not specifically state what is done when an officer is convicted of a felony while holding a license.

City Atty. James B. Brennan said that it was his off the cuff opinion that Mrs. Papia might be able to keep the positions.

until all appeals have been exhausted.

But he added that a formal opinion would have to await a careful reading of local and state laws.

Helmund H. Wolf, chief city license clerk, said that once the time for notification had been determined, the corporation would be given a reasonable period of time to change officers.

If this is not done, Wolf said, revocation proceedings could be started.

O'Connor's District

Ald. Kevin D. O'Connor, whose district the popular restaurant and tavern is located, was asked whether he would seek a revocation in such a case.

"You know I don't discuss tavern matters with reporters," said the 4th District alderman.

O'Connor said that he only discussed such matters with the license committee and the licensee.

When asked why, O'Connor said, "I think the reasons are obvious," but refused to elaborate.

Last summer, O'Connor blocked the renewal of the license for Sally's until it was agreed that a convicted felon employed there be removed from his job.

The employee, James R. Jannaro, was convicted last April of soliciting a prostitute while working in the restaurant.

MRS. PAPIA, THREE OTHERS GUILTY IN EXTORTION

20 Year

By ALIDA JOHNS

Milwaukee restaurant operator Sally Papia was found guilty by a federal court jury Friday night of extortion in connection with threats against a former chef who owed her money.

Three other defendants, Russell J. Enea, Joseph V. Basile and Maximillion J. Adonnis, were found guilty of conspiracy to commit extortion.

Mrs. Papia, 43, who also was charged with conspiracy along Adonnis, Basile with the three men, was found not guilty on that charge.

The jury of seven women and five men returned the verdicts after deliberating on the case since Wednesday. The trial before Federal Judge John W. Reynolds started Nov. 17.

Reynolds ordered a presentence investigation for Mrs. Pa-pia, operator of Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave., and the other three defendants.

The maximum penalty for each charge is 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine, according to Thomas E. Brown, an assistant US attorney who prosecuted the case.

Brown, David B. Bukey and Leah Lampone, also assistant

Enea Reynolds

US attorneys, assisted in the prosecution.

The verdict was read to a courtroom full of solemn spectators, primarily friends and relatives of the defendants.

The spectators included Mrs. Papia's daughter, Candy, and her parents.

Mrs. Papia told a reporter after the verdicts were read, "I'm thrilled the jury found me not guilty." She apparently was referring to the second count against her, on which she was found not guilty.

The jury actually deliberated only nine hours since getting the case on Wednesday.

Instructions to the jury by

Reynolds, which took two hours before jury deliberations began, were repeated twice, once in full and once partially, on Friday. On Thursday, four hours of testimony was read to the jurors. The readings to jurors during deliberations resulted from questions they asked.

Time Limits Set

Reynolds gave defense attorneys until Jan. 19 to file post-verdict motions. He said the government would have 10 days to reply.

Frankly Mr. Gimbel, Mrs. Papia's attorney, said he would file motions to overturn the verdict. If they fail, he will appeal the case, Gimbel said. Attorneys for the other three defendants also are expected to file motions to overturn the verdict.

Mrs. Papia was charged with collection of extension of credit by extortionate means and with conspiracy to collect payments of credit through extortionate means and to punish for nonpayment.

Charged with her in the conspiracy count were Enea, 34, of 8720 Pelham Pkwy., Bayside, a manager of Sally's restaurant; Basile, 35, of 1623 N. Jackson St., formerly operator of the now defunct Publix Garage; and Adonis, 40, currently serving an eight year sentence at the State Prison at Waupun.

James R. Jennaro, 45, of 1570 N. Prospect Ave., also a manager at Sally's, had been charged in the conspiracy count of the federal grand jury indictment but Reynolds pleaded him acquitted on Dec. 15, saying the evidence did not justify keeping him in the case.

Reynolds also dismissed one count of the three count indictment. That count charged Mrs. Papia and Jennaro with interference with commerce by threats or violence.

Central Figure

The case revolved around Kurt B. Amidzich, 32, of 4409 N. 91st St., a former chef at Sally's. Amidzich left the restaurant owing Mrs. Papia money and went into partnership at the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St.

The first of the many times defense counsel asked that the case be dismissed or that the court declare a mistrial came after an opening statement by Miss Lampone, one of the team of three assistant US attorneys prosecuting the case.

Miss Lampone described the case as a "saga of threats and intimidation."

Mrs. Papia, Enea and Basile took the witness stand and denied the charges. Adonis, called to testify by the other defendants outside the presence of the jury, invoked the Fifth Amendment on the ground that his testimony might be self-incriminating.

The government's most important evidence was in tape recorded conversations between Jacob John Schlechter, an unidentified co-conspirator, and Enea, Adonis and Basile.

Schlechter, working with the FBI, had worn a body recorder during the conversations which were heard by the jury.

US Witness

The 6 feet, 4, 220 pound Schlechter testified as a government witness.

He said he set fire to the Northbrook Inn last Dec. 30 on orders from Basile. He was to be paid $1,000, but only received $100, he said.

Schlechter also testified that Adonis ordered him to "scoop up" Amidzich and take him to a garage where Adonis and Enea could beat him. Schlechter said later he was told by Enea to break Amidzich's wrists so he could never cook again.

Schlechter and Herbert H. Holland, a defendant in the case who pleaded guilty, both testified that they intended to break Amidzich's wrists with a baseball bat.

The government repeatedly referred to a statement made by Adonis to Schlechter in the tapes heard by the jury. The statement was "They're trying to put everything together, trying to put Russ and Jimmy and me together with you and Herbie."

In the same conversation, Schlechter told Adonis, "I don't even know who I'm doing this (the intended beating of Amidzich) for . . ."

Answer Given

Adonis answered, "You're doing it for her. When it gets done, she'll know, 'cause she's gonna pay you."

Richard Schmitz, a partner at the inn, testified about a visit to the inn by Mrs. Papia, Enea and Jennaro.

Mrs. Papia accused Schmitz of stealing her chef, he said, and told him Amidzich owed her about $5,000.

"You could come out here some morning and this place could be burned down," Mrs. Papia said, according to Schmitz, also a government protected witness.

Amidzich testified that last New Year's Eve, after the fire at the inn, Mrs. Papia lit a match and said, "I told you this was going to happen."

Recalls Statement

He said the incident occurred at Trovato's Restaurant, 1550 N. Farwell Ave.

Amidzich also said he saw Enea at the Towne Room East at the Milwaukee Inn on one occasion. According to Amidzich, Enea said, "By fate last week you were saved. You were going to see your own blood. Your wrists were going to be broken so you could never cook again."

Testimony in the trial revealed that on the night Schlechter and Holland intended to beat Amidzich, their car was stopped by Milwaukee police and the beating did not take place.

When Mrs. Papia took the witness stand, she denied ever asking anyone to break Amidzich's wrists or to light a fire at the inn. She said she had not discussed fire or physical threats with Schmitz.

Mrs. Papia testified that when she went into Trovato's on New Year's Eve, Amidzich turned his back on her.

She said when Amidzich gave notice, he told her he realized she had been like a mother to him. Mrs. Papia said she wanted Amidzich to "prosper" so he could pay her the money he owed her.

Mrs. Sally Papia left the Federal Building after she was found guilty Friday of extortion in connection with threats against a former chef. With Mrs. Papia were her mother, Mrs. Charles Lavora; her attorney, Franklyn M. Gimbel, and her daughter, Candy. Three other defendants were found guilty of conspiracy.

Anger, Tears Flow After Verdict

By WILLIAM JANZ

After a month of listening, the jury spoke first Friday night and then everybody who had talked for a month went outside in the hallway and said what they had to say about what they had just heard.

"Kurt Amidzich is a bum," said Gerald P. Boyle, an attorney for one of the defendants who was found guilty by the jury in Federal Court.

Referring to a prime witness in the case, Boyle said, "Quote me on that. I said Kurt Amidzich is a bum."

Cigaret in hand, upset at the verdict, Boyle walked up and down throwing down ashes and tough statements.

Hugged Her Attorney:

Nearby was Mrs. Sally Papia, the primary defendant, the friend of judges and crime figures. Found both guilty and not guilty, her face splashed with tears, she hugged her attorney, Franklyn P. Gimbel.

Leaning against a railing, staring, was Joseph P. Balistrieri, an attorney for one of the other defendants.

He was very quiet as Boyle paced and Mrs. Papia cried and Gimbel carefully explained his procedure for appealing Mrs. Papia's conviction.

Mrs. Papia came up to a reporter she has known for a long time, put her arm around him and in a choked voice, said, "You want an exclusive?"

She said she was thrilled but the expression on her face was one of shock.

Attorney's Conclusion

"I'm thrilled the jury found me not guilty," she said.

"I never had anything to do with that fire or any threats made to Kurt," she said.

She referred to Amidzich, her former cook who opened up a restaurant with several others. There was a fire at his restaurant.

The jury exonerated her of the fire at the Northbrook Inn, it exonerated her of hiring hoodlums to do any injury to Kurt," Gimbel said.

If she had been tried separately from the other three defendants, she would have been found not guilty of extortion instead of guilty, the attorney said.

If the judge denies Gimbel's motions to overturn the verdict, he said he would appeal because "there is no way she got a fair trial on that count."

Balistrieri said, "The conspiracy law is unfair. It should be looked at and rewritten. It is woefully inadequate to protect the rights of people."

Inside the court, the jury had had its say and went home. The government had had its say and been declared the winner.

Outside, in the hallway, the defense had its say and left. Mrs. Papia walked off, one arm around Gimbel, a former assistant United States attorney who was primarily responsible for sending Frank P. Balistrieri, a good friend of Mrs. Papia, to prison for tax evasion.

She has always had friends on both sides. But Friday night, on one count anyway, she didn't have a friend on the jury.

Trial Had Hints of Crime World

By GERRY HINKLEY

For more than a month, a number of often tough looking, rough talking witnesses paraded through Federal Court, resulting in daily news stories which sometimes sounded like a script from a gangster movie.

Friday, a jury of seven men and five women decided what they had heard during the past five weeks was not fiction and found Mrs. Sally Papia, operator of Sally's Steak House, guilty of extortion and three others guilty of conspiracy to commit extortion.

The trial produced numerous indications that organized crime does, indeed, exist in Milwaukee, and that there is an underground way of life that is unknown to most residents.

In the government's opening statement, Leah Lampone, an assistant US attorney, told the jury the case would take them "into a foreign and unreal world where violence is planned as you and I might plan to go to a basketball game."

The trip was taken, via the testimony, through that world — a world in which the testimony told of threats being made, a fire being set, plans being made to smash wrists — and the jury decided it was real.

Throughout the trip, there were numerous road signs indicating the existence of organized crime in Milwaukee. The most prominent was the implication that there is at least a degree of organization involved.

The testimony showed that — In his latest statement on persons had to answer to others for their actions, and if approval had not been obtained, someone had to pay.

INTERPRETATION OF THE NEWS

The strongest statement came in a tape recording of a bugged conversation between one of the defendants, Joseph V. Basile, and Jacob John Schlechter, an unindicted co-conspirator.

Basile, on the tape, told Schlechter, "Frankie Bal scooped me up with a pistol. He says 'Why did you burn the joint down without telling me?' I said because I don't like the guy. He says 'Is that the only reason?' I said I never liked the guy... He says 'Why did you burn the joint down without telling me because,' he says, 'I was involved with part of that.'"

Testimony at the trial said Frankie Bal was Frank Balistreri, not otherwise identified, and his interest in the place — the Northbrook Inn — was jukeboxes.

Basile later took the witness stand and testified he had made up the story about Balistreri. He said he was afraid of Schlechter and wanted him to know others knew about the fire.

Schlechter admitted setting the fire at the Northbrook Inn.

The testimony about organization is significant in light of repeated denials by Police Chief Harold A. Breier that organized crime exists in Milwaukee.

The testimony showed that the issue, Breier refined it to, "There is no prosecutable evidence of organized crime being in the city."

Other law enforcement officers said they believe the trial has had one major impact on organized crime here — publicity.

And the bosses do not like publicity. It exposes them and their organization.

It alerts the public that such activities do exist here — that they aren't something that happens only in movies, in books or elsewhere.

And if the public becomes aroused, it might demand that something be done.

It also could make it more difficult for organized crime figures to make the inroads with politicians, law enforcement officials and legitimate businesses that are necessary for their existence.

For this reason alone, several law enforcement officials, who were contacted, were enthusiastic about the case.

But except for the impact of publicity, most of the officials agreed that the case has had little effect on the operations of organized crime in Milwaukee.

The trial has been beneficial to law enforcement, according to one official, by making informants more willing to testify.

The fact that several government witnesses received protection and the case did indeed go to trial has helped encourage informants to come forward, he said.

US Jurors Convict Mrs. Papia, 3 Others

(Indicate page, name of newspaper, city and state.)

The five week trial of Sally Papia and three others, one of the most prominent trials here in years, ended Friday night with guilty verdicts for each of the defendants.

Mrs. Papia, 43, owner of Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave., cried after the jury presented its verdict in Federal Court.

The jury had had the case since Wednesday.

Mrs. Papia was found guilty of using illegal methods to collect money owed her by her former chef. She was found innocent of conspiring to commit extortion, the charge on which the three other defendants were found guilty.

The other defendants were Russell J. Enea, 34, of 8720 N. Pelham Pkwy., Bayside; Joseph V. Basile, 35, of 1623 N. Jackson St., and Maximillion J. Adonnis, 40, who is serving an eight year sentence at the State Prison at Waupun.

Atty. Thomas P. Doherty, representing Adonnis, asked that the jury be polled, and each juror, in turn, said Adonnis was guilty as charged. Other defense attorneys did not request polls.

Atty. Gerald P. Boyle, representing Enea, said he thought that the jury did a fine job but added, "It's a perverse verdict." Boyle told Federal Judge

John W. Reynolds that he did not understand how Mrs. Papia could be found innocent of the conspiracy charges, and Enea found guilty.

Reynolds gave the defense attorneys until Jan. 19 to file motions requesting acquittal in spite of the verdict. All of the defense attorneys said they would file the motions.

Reynolds also ordered a presentence investigation, but no date was set for sentencing.

Each defendant faces a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

All of the defendants had pleaded not guilty.

The trial started on Nov. 17 and lasted five weeks. It involved alleged efforts by Mrs. Papia and the other three defendants to illegally collect money owed to Mrs. Papia by her former chef, Kurt Amidzich.

Amidzich, 32, a chef and business partner at the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St., quit as chef at Mrs. Papia's restaurant in October, 1974. He left without paying $5,000 he owed her and later he was allegedly threatened and the Northbrook Inn set on fire.

Arson Described

Jacobs, John Schlechter, an unindicted co-conspirator, testified that he had set fire to the inn on Dec. 30, 1974, on orders from Basile. Basile denied that he had hired Schlechter to set the fire.

Schlechter, 31, also told the court that Enea and Adonnis had hired him and Herbert H. Holland to break Amidzich's wrists. Amidzich's wrists were not broken. Enea denied that he had hired Schlechter and Holland. Adonnis did not testify.

on Nov. 12 and agreed to testify as a government witness against the other defendants.

James R. Jennaro, 45, of 1570 N. Prospect Ave., had also been charged with extortion and conspiracy to commit extortion, but after four weeks of trial, Reynolds ruled that the government did not have enough evidence against Jennaro to convict him and he was acquitted.

All the defendants in the trial still face similar charges in Circuit Court, a state level trial court. No date has been set for that trial.

When Jennaro was dismissed from the trial on Dec. 15, Reynolds also dismissed a count of the indictment that alleged that Jennaro and Mrs. Papia had interfered with interstate commerce between the Northbrook Inn and businesses outside Wisconsin by alleged threats to burn the inn down.

Conspiracy Alleged

All of the defendants were named in one count of the grand jury indictment, issued April 22, which alleged that the defendants conspired to use extortion to collect some $5,000 from Amidzich and his three business partners.

The third count in the indictment against Mrs. Papia and Jennaro alleged that they had tried to use illegal methods to collect $2,000 from Amidzich that he allegedly owed Mrs. Papia for paying his taxes.

Here is a chronology of the TRIAL'S OVER — James R. Jennaro, acquitted in the trial earlier this week, followed Russell J. Enea from the courthouse Friday night. Enea was found guilty of conspiracy.

Oct. 21, 1974 — About one week after the inn opened for business, Mrs. Papia, Jennaro and Enea visited the Northbrook and allegedly threatened Amidzich's business partner, Richard G. Schmitz, that the inn would be burned down if the money was not paid. Mrs. Papia denied in court that she threatened anyone. Enea also denied the threats.

Nov. 30, 1974 — Mrs. Papia took Amidzich's 1973 Cadillac without his consent. Mrs. Papia told the court that she took the car in efforts to get Amidzich to come and discuss with her how he was going to pay the balance owed on it. She said she had co-signed for the car.

Dec. 29, 1974 — Basile allegedly ordered Schlechter to burn down the inn.

Dec. 30, 1974 — Schlechter set fire to the inn.

Dec. 31, 1974 — Mrs. Papia and Amidzich were both at home.

Trovato's Restaurant, 1550 N. Farwell Ave. Amidzich testified that Mrs. Papia lit a match and said, "I told you this was going to happen." Mrs. Papia denied that.

January, 1975 — Adonis met with Schlechter at Holland's Massage Parlor, 1915 W. Hampton Ave., and allegedly told Schlechter to break Amidzich's wrists. Schlechter allegedly told Adonis that he would get Holland to help and Adonis agreed. In a separate meeting, Enea also allegedly told Schlechter to break Amidzich's wrists.

Schlechter was arrested in connection with another crime in February and agreed to be a government witness. He wore a concealed tape recorder while talking with defendants.

The tape recordings that Schlechter made of conversations with Adonis, Enea and Basile were a central part of the case presented by Asst. U.S. Attorneys Thomas E. Brown, David B. Bukey and Leah Lane.

Papia Jury Hears Instructions Again

By Monroe Walker
of The Journal Staff

Federal Judge John W. Reynolds' instructions to the jury were read to it Friday for the second time in the trial of Sally Papia and three others allegedly involved in an arson and extortion plot.

The instructions, which were first presented Wednesday night before the jury began deliberations, were read again as part of a request Thursday by the jury that extortion be defined.

Defense attorneys argued that presenting the definition of extortion would highlight it and make it appear more important than the rest of the jury instructions.

Reynolds ruled that all of the instructions would be read again. Reading the instructions took about two hours.

The jury verdict is expected Friday night or Saturday.

The jury also requested that testimony by Richard Schmitz, 41, the government's first witness and a partner at the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St., be read.

The reading, which started about 5 p.m. Thursday, lasted nearly four hours.

Request Denied

Schmitz had testified that Mrs. Papia had threatened to burn down the Northbrook if the money owed her by her former chef, Kurt Amidzich, was not paid.

Amidzich, 32, quit in October, 1974, as chef at Mrs. Papia's restaurant, Sally's Steak House at 1028 E. Juneau Ave., and went to work as a partner at the Northbrook. When he failed to pay Mrs. Papia loans he owed her, Amidzich was allegedly threatened and the inn was set on fire.

Reynolds denied a request by the jury that it be allowed to read transcripts of taped conversations between Jacob John Schlechter, an unindicted co-conspirator who has testified that he set fire to the Northbrook on Dec. 30, 1974, and defendants Russell J. Enea, 34, Joseph V. Basile, 35, and Maximillion J. Adonis, 40.

Reynolds said the transcripts were not in evidence. He added, however, that the tapes were. It is expected that the jury may ask to hear the tapes again.

Testimony Read to Jury For 4 Hours

The jury in the federal extortion case of Sally Papia and three others retired for the night at 9 p.m. Thursday after listening to the reading of nearly four hours of trial testimony.

The jurors will begin their third day of deliberations in the case Friday.

Court had been reconvened about 5 p.m. Thursday when the jurors requested a definition of the word extortion and asked that the testimony of the first government witness be read to them.

Federal Judge John W. Reynolds told the defendants, their lawyers and government attorneys that he had declined another jury request.

Request Denied

That request was to let the jury have the transcripts of the tape recorded conversations between Jacob John Schlechter, an unindicted co-conspirator in the case, and three of the defendants, Maximillion J. Adonis, Russell J. Enea and Joseph V. Basile. Reynolds denied the request, saying the transcripts were not an evidence.

He said the jury requests were sought by Edward J. Ott, who he presumed was the jury foreman. Ott, 70, is a retired social worker with a master's degree.

Reynolds ruled that the jurors could be given the instruction on extortion and could have read to them the transcript of the testimony of Richard Schmitz, 41, who was a partner in the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St. The transcript ran about 100 pages.

The defendants are charged in an alleged extortion plot involving a fire at the inn and collection of a debt owed to Mrs. Papia by her former chef, Kurt Amidzich.

Told of Fright

Schmitz, protected by the US marshal's service, testified he was frightened in connection with a visit to the inn by Mrs. Papia, Enea and James R. Jennaro. Charges against Jennaro were dismissed during the course of the trial.

Schmitz said Mrs. Papia accused him of stealing her chef and told him Amidzich owed her between $5,000 and $5,400. "You could come out here some morning and this place could be burned down," Mrs. Papia said, according to Schmitz.

After a monthlong trial, the case went to the jury shortly after 5 p.m. Wednesday.

City Asked to Rule on Mrs. Papia

Ald. Clarence Miller said Monday that he would ask the city attorney whether the conviction of Sally Papia required her removal as an officer of the corporation holding the tavern license for her restaurant.

Miller said he also asked whether, in the absence of a law making her removal mandatory, the Common Council could decide against her.

Mrs. Papia, 43, owner of Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Jumeau Ave., was found guilty in Federal Court Dec. 19 of using illegal methods to collect money owed her by her former chef. A city ordinance says that no license shall be granted to a person convicted of a felony. This applies to officers of corporations holding such licenses.

The ordinance does not specify what is to be done when an officer holding a license is convicted of a felony.

2 Papia Witnesses Sentenced

Two men who have testified in a number of criminal trials for the prosecution pleaded guilty Wednesday to armed robbery and were placed on 15 years' probation. They had testified in Federal Court in the case of Sally Papia, who was convicted of extortion, and several others who were convicted of conspiring to commit extortion.

The men are Jacob John Schlechter, 31, and Herbert Holland, 32. Their addresses were not in court records, and officials said they were being held in protective custody.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Thomas Schneider asked that the two be placed on probation, rather than receiving prison terms, in the armed robbery last Feb. 2 of a large number of drugs from a Greenfield home.

Schneider told Circuit Judge Christ T. Seraphim that they had testified with armed burglary and endangering safety by conduct regardless of life. Under a plea bargain, those two were considered in sentencing.

Schneider also said that they had given evidence and testified against a number of people already convicted of various crimes and that they had agreed to testify against others.

Seraphim commented that he usually sentenced armed robbers to prison. He gave each defendant a 17 year sentence at the State Prison at Waupun, but stayed it and gave each the 15 years' probation.

The two had originally been

Detective Resigns Over Visits

By MARY ZAHN
and GERRY HINKLEY

A Milwaukee detective has resigned from the Police Department under pressure because of his visits to the home of restaurant operator Sally Papia, it was learned Tuesday.

Sources said Detective John Schroeder resigned two weeks ago under pressure from the department's Internal Affairs Bureau.

Schroeder reportedly had been seen making several visits to the home of Mrs. Papia, who on Dec. 19 was found guilty of extortion by a federal court jury. State charges stemming from an alleged extortion plot are pending against her.

Sources said police officers assigned to guard Mrs. Papia because of a reported threat on her life had seen Schroeder visiting the house.

The officers, who according to one source numbered as many as 26, did not report Schroeder's activities to the Police Department, it was reported.

Sources said that Schroeder was told if he did not resign, departmental charges would be brought against those officers.

Neither Schroeder nor Mrs. Papia could be reached for comment Tuesday.

Police Chief Harold A. Breier also was unavailable for comment.

The Police Department began providing round the clock protection for Mrs. Papia in August after the FBI received information from an informant about an alleged threat on her life.

The protection was discontinued after her conviction in Federal Court.

2 Granted Probation

Two men who appeared as government witnesses in the federal extortion trial of Sally Papia were placed on probation for 15 years on armed robbery charges Wednesday.

The men, Jacob John Schlechter, 31, and Herbert Holland, 32, pleaded guilty to an armed robbery last Feb. 2 in which a large amount of drugs was taken from a Greenfield home.

Thomas Schneider, an assistant district attorney, asked that the men be given probation, noting their testimony in the case involving Mrs. Papia and in other cases.

Circuit Judge Christ T. Seraphim sentenced each of the defendants to 17 years in prison, but then stayed that sentence and ordered probation.

6 Move to Bar State Papia Trial

Sally A. Papia and five others asked Monday that criminal charges filed against them by the district attorney's organized crime unit be dismissed because of a previous Federal Court trial.

Circuit Judge John E. McCormick said he would hear arguments on the motions at 9 a.m. next Monday. Attorneys for the defendants said state law barred federal and state prosecution for identical criminal acts.

Mrs. Papia, 43, operator of Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave., was convicted by a Federal Court jury in December of extortion in connection with threats against a former chef who she said owed her money.

At the same time, Russell J. Enea, 34, a manager at Sally's; Maximillion J. Adonis, 40, former part time headwaiter at Sally's, and Joseph V. Basile, 35, were found guilty of conspiracy to commit extortion. All four are appealing the federal convictions and face maximum federal prison terms of 20 years each.

James R. Jennaro, 45, who also had been a manager at Sally's, and Herbert H. Holland, 32, also were named in both the state and federal charges resulting from investigations of the extortion incident. Jennaro was dismissed as a defendant after the federal trial began, and Holland became a key prosecution witness.

Last Oct. 24, the six defendants were indicted by a federal grand jury and were named in state criminal complaints as a result of a John Doe investigation.

The charges involved Kurt Amidzich, a onetime chef for Mrs. Papia, and the burning of the Northbrook Inn on the Northwest Side. Amidzich began work at the restaurant in the fall of 1974 and was a partner in the operation.

State Drops Charges Against 6 in Papia Case

State criminal charges of extortion against Sally A. Papia, operator of Sally's Steak House, and five others were dismissed Monday because of a previous Federal Court trial on the same offenses.

Circuit Judge John E. McCormick took the action on a motion by attorneys for the defendants.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Thomas P. Schneider, head of the district attorney's Organized Crime Unit, did not object, saying that the interests of justice had been served by convictions obtained in the federal trial in December.

However, McCormick set April 27 for the trial of Russell J. Enea, 34, a manager at Sally's and one of the original six defendants, on a separate extortion charge involving the owner of a downtown women's apparel store.

Mrs. Papia, 43, had been convicted of extortion in connection with threats against Kurt Amidzich, a onetime chef for her who she said owed her money. Amidzich had begun work at the Northbrook Inn on the Northwest Side in the fall of 1974 and was a partner in the restaurant when it burned in an arson fire Dec. 30 of that year.

Others Found Guilty

Enea, Maximillion J. Adonis, 40, former part time head waiter at Sally's, and Joseph V. Basile, 35, were found guilty in the federal trial of conspiracy to commit extortion. All four are appealing the conviction.

James R. Jennaro, 45, who also had been a manager at Sally's, and Herbert H. Holland, 32, also were named in the state and federal charges resulting from investigations of the Amidzich extortion incident. Jennaro was dismissed as a defendant after the federal trial began, and Holland became a key prosecution witness after pleading guilty.

Last Oct. 24, the six defendants were indicted by a federal grand jury and named in state criminal complaints as a result of a John-Doe investigation.

The state charge remaining against Enea said that he had asked Jacob John Schlechter to go to Lou Fritzel's, a women's apparel store at 733 N. Milwaukee St., to punch Clyde J. Wittman, operator of the store.

$133 Bill Disputed

The complaint against Enea said Enea ~~had owed~~ Fritzel's $133 since March, 1973, for clothes purchased there and that Wittman had obtained a judgment against Enea because the bill was not paid.

Wittman went to Sally's, 1028 E. Juneau Ave., on Jan. 16, 1975, to ask Enea about the money, and quarrel ensued, according to the complaint. Enea met with Schlechter eight days later, and the assault occurred on Feb. 6, according to the complaint. After the assault, Wittman contacted his attorney to stop all legal action to collect the bill, according to the complaint.

Schlechter has been an unindicted co-conspirator in the federal case, and was named as a co-conspirator but not charged in the state complaints.

Both Schlechter and Holland are in protective custody of the US Justice Department.

McCormick continued Enea's $1,000 personal recognition bond.

Commission Backs Detective's Firing

By Marie Rohde
of The Journal Staff

The Fire and Police Commission Tuesday upheld the firing of a Milwaukee police detective who supplied departmental photographs to a man with an extensive police record.

The former detective, Paul S. Viljevac, maintained that he acted as a police officer in giving the pictures to Maximillion J. Adonnis. He said the pictures were to be used to obtain information that could lead to the breaking up of a narcotics ring.

He denied any knowledge of Adonnis' record.

Adonnis at the time was awaiting sentencing on auto theft charges. He is serving a prison sentence on those charges and is awaiting sentencing in a federal extortion case in which Sally Papia, operator of Sally's Steak House, also was convicted.

Request Described

Herbert H. Holland, 32, who is in the protective custody of the US marshal after testifying for the government at the extortion trial, said he asked Adonnis for the photographs of a drug dealer with whom he and a friend had been having trouble.

"I told him (Adonnis) I wanted it (the photograph) because we wanted to blow this guy away," Holland said. He explained that he and his friend intended to shoot the man.

The picture Viljevac obtained was that of a known narcotics dealer. Holland, however, said it was the wrong man. The man whose picture he wanted spelled his name differently, he said.

Holland said he told Adonnis to get a second picture, but Holland was arrested before he could obtain that picture. Holland said that when he asked Adonnis how he was able to obtain the police pictures, Adonnis "looked at Mr. Viljevac and said, 'I take care of my people well!'"

Meeting Described

Viljevac denied having ever seen Holland.

An other witness, Mark Gary, also known as Ray Stoeckle, 46, who is currently serving a jail sentence, testified that he saw Viljevac enter ARI Motors, where Adonnis works. Viljevac, he said, arrived in a police van and was wearing plain clothes.

Viljevac gave an envelope to Adonnis and said, "Here's the pictures we discussed," Gary testified. He said he then saw Viljevac leave with a cardboard box filled with what he thought were motorcycle parts.

Viljevac denied receiving any motorcycle parts that he did not pay for.

The situation was brought to the attention of the Police Department during an FBI investigation involving Adonnis. Inspector Kenneth Hagopian testified.

Practice Defended

Robert Klesmet, secretary-treasurer of the Professional Policeman's Protective Association, testified at the trial that ambitious officers often gave police photographs to persons they were trying to cultivate as sources. He said he had given away 100 or so when he was on patrol duty.

Hagopian denied that officers were allowed to give away police photographs and said it was not good police procedure.

Mrs. Papia Wins $2,200 Judgment

Sally Papia will recover the $2,200 she claimed her former chef owed her, Circuit Judge Hugh R. O'Connell ruled Thursday after a short trial.

Mrs. Papia, operator of Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave., started a suit last May in which she claimed that Kurt Amidzich, her former chef, owed her $2,200 as a result of a promissory note Amidzich and his wife signed. (Amidzich said during the trial that he would pay Mrs. Papia the money.)

Mrs. Papia was found guilty Dec. 19 by a Federal Court jury of using illegal methods to collect money owed her by Amidzich. She is appealing the verdict.

Kurt Amidzich

The civil case involving the $2,200 was filed a month after Mrs. Papia was indicted by a federal grand jury. The complaint said Amidzich, of 3739 N. 49th St., and his wife Rosana signed a promissory note with Mrs. Papia Sept. 16, 1974, for $2,200. The note was payable in four months.

In court Thursday Mrs. Papia's attorney, Franklyn M. Gimbel, produced a copy of the promissory note. Mrs. Papia testified that Amidzich was her chef at the time he signed the note.

She said he told her he needed the money to pay taxes. She testified that she gave the money to her tax attorney, Stanley Gimbel, to use to pay Amidzich's taxes.

Amidzich left Sally's Steak House, in the Knickerbocker Hotel, in the fall of 1974 to become a partner in the Northbrook Inn on the far Northwest Side. The Northbrook Inn was destroyed by fire Dec. 30, 1974. Authorities said the fire resulted from arson.

Mrs. Papia testified during her federal trial that she had taken a 1973 Cadillac from the Northbrook Inn because Amidzich had not paid back the money she said he owned her. The car later was returned.

Thursday Amidzich and his wife told O'Connell that they did not wish to contest Mrs. Papia's claim for the money. They told O'Connell that they were not being pressured into making this decision. Earlier they dismissed their attorney and appeared before O'Connell without counsel.

New Trial Sought for Mrs. Papia

Federal Judge John W. Reynolds took under advisement Thursday oral arguments that Milwaukee restaurant operator Sally Papia and three others convicted in an extortion plot should be given new trials or acquitted.

Franklyn M. Gimpel, attorney representing Mrs. Papia, argued that she had not been convicted of conspiracy along with the other three defendants and therefore she should have had a separate trial. He added that some of the evidence presented would not have been allowed if Mrs. Papia had been tried separately.

Mrs. Papia was convicted of using illegal means to collect money from her former chef.

Other defense attorneys argued that it did not make sense for the jury to find Mrs. Papia not guilty of conspiracy and to find the others guilty because they were allegedly carrying out the threats for her.

Mrs. Papia, 43, operates Sally's Steak House at 1028 E. Juncau Ave.

The case involves threats to Kurt Amidzich, 32, a former chef at Mrs. Papia's restaurant. In October, 1974, Amidzich quit as chef at the restaurant and went to work as a partner in the Northbrook Inn at 9600 N. 124th St. without paying Mrs. Papia money he owed her.

When the loans were not repaid, Mrs. Papia allegedly threatened to have the inn burned down and to have Amidzich's wrists broken. The inn was set on fire on Dec. 30, 1974, but Amidzich's wrists were never broken.

After five weeks of trial in December, a Federal Court jury found Mrs. Papia guilty of the extortion count. The three co-defendants found guilty of conspiracy are Russell J. Enea, 34, of 3720 N. Pelham Pkwy., Bayside; Joseph V. Basile, 35, of 1623 N. Jackson St.; and Maximillion J. Adonis, 40, who is serving an eight year sentence at the State Prison at Waupun.

No date for sentencing has been set.

Mrs. Papia Loses Bid for Acquittal

Federal Judge John W. Reynolds Tuesday denied requests that Sally Papia, operator of Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave., and three others convicted on extortion charges be acquitted.

Defense attorneys had argued that Mrs. Papia and the others should have had separate trials and that the jury's verdict was inconsistent with evidence presented in the case.

In his order Tuesday, Judge Reynolds said he did not find this to be so.

He set a sentencing date of April 9 for Mrs. Papia, 43, 2820

N. Menomonee River Pkwy.; Russell J. Enea, 34, 8720 N. Pelham Pkwy., Bayside; Joseph V. Basile, 35, 1623 N. Jackson St., and Maximillion J. Adonis, 40, who is serving an eight year sentence at the State Prison at Waupun.

The jury trial, which lasted nearly five weeks last November and December, involved alleged efforts by Mrs. Papia and the other three defendants to illegally collect money owed to Mrs. Papia by her former chef, Kurt Amidzich.

Each faces a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine, according to the US attorney's office here.

Adonnis Sentenced to 15 Years

Maximillion J. Adonnis, 40, was sentenced Monday to 15 years in prison after being convicted last December on federal charges of extortion.

Federal Judge John W. Reynolds ruled that the 15 year sentence could be served concurrently with an 8 year sentence Adonnis is serving at the State Prison at Waupun on convictions of two counts of grand auto theft.

Adonnis and three others were convicted by a jury on extortion charges stemming from efforts to collect money owed Sally Papia by a former chef.

The chef, Kurt Amidzich, 32, left Mrs. Papia's restaurant, Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave., in October, 1974, to become a partner in the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 12th St.

According to court testimony, Amidzich, who had failed to repay loans to Mrs. Papia, was threatened and the Northbrook Inn was set on fire.

Mrs. Papia, 43, is to be sentenced April 26. The others, Russell J. Enea, 34, of 8720 N. Pelham Pkwy., Bayside, and Joseph V. Basile, 35, of 1623 N. Jackson St., are to be sentenced Thursday.

Basile, Enea Get Papia Case Terms

By ALIDA JOHNS

Calling their conduct unconscionable, Federal Judge John W. Reynolds Thursday sentenced Joseph V. Basile to seven years in prison and Russell J. Enea to three years.

The sentences were stayed pending the outcome of an appeal.

Both men were found guilty Dec. 19 of conspiracy to commit extortion in a case involving Milwaukee restaurant operator Sally Papia.

Mrs. Papia, found guilty of extortion in connection with threats against a former chef who owed her money, will be sentenced April 26.

Another defendant in the case, Maximillion J. Adonis, who was convicted of conspiracy to commit extortion, was sentenced Monday to 15 years in prison.

According to testimony in the case, the former chef's restaurant was burned down and plans were made to break his wrists.

Atty. Joseph P. Balsitri, representing Basile, asked the court for clemency for his client.

Thomas E. Brown, one of the assistant US attorneys who prosecuted the case, said the government recommended the maximum sentence of 20 years.

Reynolds said Basile's "type of conduct . . . shocks the conscience of this court."

He said Basile's offense took place while he was the subject of a presentence investigation for another matter in Federal Court.

Basile, 35, of 1623 N. Jackson St., had pleaded guilty to the theft of less than $100 from a bank and was placed on two years probation in 1974.

Atty. Gerald P. Boyle asked for probation for his client, Enea, 35, of 8720 Pelham Pkwy., Bayside.

Boyle told the court that Enea was the father of three children and his brother had died recently, leaving a family of four.

But, Brown said probation would not be appropriate for Enea, who is manager of Mrs. Papia's restaurant, Sally's Steakhouse, 1028 E. Juneau Ave.

Reynolds said he found Enea's "conduct unconscionable."

Enea, Basile Sentenced for Extortion

Federal Judge John W. Reynolds sentenced Russell J. Enea to three years in prison and Joseph V. Basile to seven years in prison Thursday on federal extortion charges.

Enea, 35, of 8720 N. Pelham Pkwy., Bayside, and Basile, 35, of 1623 N. Jackson St., were convicted Dec. 19 by a federal jury of conspiracy to commit extortion.

Reynolds refused a request by Enea's attorney that Enea be given probation. Attorneys for Enea and Basile said they would appeal, and Reynolds granted a stay of sentencing pending the appeals.

Convicted in December with Enea and Basile were two others, including Sally Papia, 43, operator of Sally's Steak House at 1028 E. Juneau Ave.

According to testimony during the trial, Mrs. Papia and the three others used illegal methods to collect money owed her by a former chef.

The chef, Kurt Amidzich, 32, quit Mrs. Papia's restaurant in October, 1974, and went to work as a business partner in the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St.

When he failed to repay loans he owned to Mrs. Papia, Amidzich was threatened, and the Northbrook Inn was set on fire.

Mrs. Papia is scheduled to be sentenced April 26. The fourth defendant, Maximillion J. Adonnis, 40, was sentenced Monday to 15 years in prison, to be served concurrently with another eight year sentence.

Mrs. Papia Quits As Sally's Officer

Mrs. Sally Papia, recently convicted of extortion, has removed herself as an officer and director of the corporation that operates Sally's Steak House.

According to an application filed in the city license clerk's office, Mrs. Papia's daughter, Candace, 22, of 2880 N. Menomonee River Pkwy., has replaced her mother as secretary of Sally's Steak House & Cocktail Lounge, Inc. at 1028 E. Juneau Ave.

Miss Papia also has become the majority stockholder in the corporation. Her mother formerly held all 100 shares of stock in the operation.

Mrs. Papia now holds 30 shares and her daughter 70, according to the application.

Leo A. Crivello, of 2876 N. 47th St., the president and agent for the corporation, has replaced Mrs. Papia as treasurer.

Replacing Mrs. Papia as a director is her mother, Mrs. Josephine Lavora, 64, of 2518 S. 64th St.

City ordinances prohibit granting a tavern license to a corporation if an officer has been convicted of a felony.

City ordinances also prohibit granting a license to a corporation when more than 50% of its stock is held by a person convicted of a felony.

Miss Papia, who has been serving as vice president of the corporation, has been employed part time in the office at the restaurant since October of 1973, according to the application.

Crivello is also a director of the corporation.

Mrs. Papia recently was sentenced to 60 days in jail under a work release program and placed on probation for one year.

Probation Ordered In Attack

Russell J. Enea, 35, was placed on probation for two years Tuesday after pleading guilty to reduced charges of being a party to battery and theft.

The charges against Enea accused him of asking another man to go to Lou Fritzel's, a women's apparel store at 733 N. Milwaukee St., and punch Clyde Wittman, operator of the store. After the assault, Wittman stopped legal action aimed at collecting $133 Enea owed the store.

Thomas Schneider, head of the district attorney's Organized Crime Unit, told Circuit Judge John E. McCormick that the victim, the Police Department, district attorney and defense attorney had agreed to the negotiated plea and probation recommendation.

Enea, a manager of Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave., earlier this month was sentenced to three years in prison in a federal extortion case involving Mrs. Sally Papia, operator of the restaurant, and two others. That conviction is being appealed.

McCormick ordered that the state probation term be served consecutive to the federal prison sentence.

Mrs. Papia Gets 60 Days

By ALIDA JOHNS

Citing the deterrent effect of jail, Federal Judge John W. Reynolds Monday sentenced Milwaukee restaurant owner Sally Papia to serve 60 days under the work release program.

Reynolds also placed Mrs. Papia on probation for one year following the jail term. The sentence was stayed pending the outcome of an appeal.

Prior to sentencing Mrs. Papia, who was convicted of extortion last December after a five week trial, the judge said that it was "difficult to know what to do."

Reynolds said he knew Mrs. Papia was "a hard working person" and that she had "suffered greatly."

Reynolds said the jury had properly found Mrs. Papia guilty of extortion. The case involved threats against a former chef of Mrs. Papia who owed her money and the arson of his restaurant.

"In view of the severity of the offense" and to "deter others" Reynolds said a jail sentence was necessary.

The maximum penalty is 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Franklyn M. Gimbel, representing Mrs. Papia, operator of Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave., pleaded for probation for his client.

Gimbel said "a relatively obscure person" who was a first offender would be placed on probation. He said the Papia trial had been a showcase for law enforcement persons.

"Sally Papia is a good woman... she is not a criminal," Gimbel said.

"You could come out here some morning and this place could be burned down," Mrs. Papia said, according to Schmitz, a government witness.

Mrs. Papia's sentence will permit her to continue to work at the restaurant with nonworking time to be spent at a jail — such as the Waukesha County Jail — approved by the Bureau of Prisons.

He said she could cry out "I am a woman who has lived 45 years without a criminal record... I have done my best to serve my family, myself, the public... run an honest, decent business."

Gimbel said the news media had made Mrs. Papia a notorious person.

He said her name had been used in headlines in the cases of the co-defendants, Russell

Enea Joseph V. Basile and Maximillion J. Adonnis.

The three men were convicted of conspiracy to commit extortion. Reynolds sentenced Enea to 3 years in prison, Basile to 7 years and Adonnis to 15 years. The sentences are stayed pending appeal.

Thomas E. Brown, an assistant U.S. attorney who prosecuted the case, told the court Mrs. Papia's crime was one of "fear and intimidation."

The successful and powerful don't have the right to intimidate the weak, Brown said.

He said Mrs. Papia's achievements did not give her the right to threaten that a restaurant would be burned.

Brown referred to the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St. According to the testimony of Richard Schmitz, a partner in the inn, Mrs. Papia accused him of stealing her chef.

Mrs. Papia said her chef, Kurt B. Amidzich, owed her money, Schmitz testified.

Probation for Papia Associate

One of the defendants charged along with Mrs. Sally Papia in an alleged extortion plot was placed on five years' probation by Federal Judge John W. Reynolds.

Herbert H. Holland, 32, pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit extortion. Under government protective custody, Holland testified against the other defendants during their five week jury trial.

Mrs. Papia, operator of Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave., was found guilty of extortion. The other defendants, Russell J. Enea, Joseph V. Basile and Maximillion J. Adonis, were found guilty of conspiracy to commit extortion. All four plan to appeal.

The case involved threats to a former chef of Mrs. Papia and the fire at his place of business, the Northbrook Inn, 3601 N. 124th St.

Mrs. Papia's Hand Slap

To The Journal: Extortion is a tool of organized crime. With their thugs who will stop at nothing, it is a workable system in which brute force is used to coerce and intimidate the weak. Because of the nature of this heinous violation of the law, society has seen fit to penalize those who resort to it with 20-year prison terms and $10,000 fines.

Yet Federal Judge John W. Reynolds has sentenced Mrs. Sally Papia, who was found guilty of extortion by a jury, to 60 days in jail under the work release program. How can anyone have respect for the law when a federal judge can use the bench to perpetrate this judicial travesty on our society?

To top it off, Reynolds then rationalized the meager hand slapping he did hand down by saying Mrs. Papia was "a hard working person and that she had suffered greatly during her trial."

Being a police officer, I have seen many hard working people suffering during their trials and then suffer even more by getting stiff sentences after it. Of course they were usually poor or black, but then what are the courts for?

I have heard the axiom that justice delayed is justice denied. To this I would like to add an axiom of my own: Justice ignored is no justice at all.

Amidzich Opens New Restaurant

A chef who was a key figure in the federal extortion trial of Sally Papia has opened a restaurant on Okaukee Lake in the Town of Oconomowoc.

Town officials said that Kurt Amidzich, 33, has applied for a liquor license for Kurt's New Northbrook Inn.

Amidzich, a former chef at Sally's Steak House, the restaurant operated by Mrs. Papia, had briefly been a partner in the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St. The venture ended with a fire in December, 1975.

A government witness in the extortion trial testified that he set fire to the Northbrook Inn on orders from another defendant in the case, Joseph V. Basile.

Amidzich's new restaurant formerly was operated as the Captain's Quarters by Philip N. Minessale, 2057 W. Layton Ave.

Town officials said Minessale still holds the liquor license for the business. A public hearing is scheduled for June 14 on Amidzich's request for a liquor license.

Town of Oconomowoc police said checks showed that Amidzich was running the restaurant operation and was not involved in the bar at this time.

In a related development

Kurt
Amidzich

Minessale appeared before the Common Council's Utilities and Licenses Committee last week on his request for a liquor license for a tavern at 3353 S. 13th St. Minessale's license for the tavern was not renewed in June, 1975, because of objections by neighbors and former Ald. Robert Kordus.

Ald. Daniel Ziolkowski, who now represents the district, told the committee that he had talked to 23 area residents and that 20 were opposed to reopening the tavern.

The committee postponed action on the request after being told that the building might be sold to a corporation, which would reopen it as a family restaurant.

Article appearing in "The Milwaukee Sentinel," Milwaukee, Wisconsin, dated 3/3/72, captioned, "Waiter Convicted In Battery Case," sets forth the following:

Waiter Convicted In Battery Case

A headwaiter at Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave., was found guilty by a Circuit Court jury Thursday of being a party to the crimes of aggravated battery and false imprisonment.

The charges against Maximillion J. Adonnis, 36, of 1135 S. 25th St., were issued in connection with an alleged attempt to recover loot taken in a burglary at the home of Mrs. Sally Papia Buccieri, the operator of Sally's.

Acting Circuit Judge James Rice, of Sparta, ordered a presentence investigation.

Lee Wells, an assistant district attorney, noted in his closing arguments that the state's main witness, Allen Quindt, of 6048 N. 61st St., several times during the trial testified that he could not remember Quindt was the victim.

"His failure to remember... is a manifestation of his fear and his continuing fear," Wells said. "He had a good reason to be frightened. His fear was a fear of death. That fear extended from Aug. 3 and continued to yesterday (the day he testified)."

Quindt earlier testified that on Aug. 3 he was taken to a West-Side garage where he was held captive and questioned by several men about the burglary of Mrs. Buccieri's home. He said he was told he was going to be killed.

Quindt said he suffered a broken jaw and had guns pointed at his head. One gun was fired near him before he escaped.

At the trial, Quindt testified that he could not remember who fired the gun. A preliminary hearing in the case, he had testified that it was Adonis.

Mrs. Buccieri's home was burglarized on July 4 and valuables worth more than $49,000 were taken. Later many of the valuables were returned, although police said they did not know who returned them.

Article appearing in "The Milwaukee Sentinel," Milwaukee, Wisconsin, dated 5/25/72, captioned, "Adonnis Gets 2 Year Prison Term," sets forth the following:

Adonnis

Gets 2 Year Prison Term

Maximillion J. Adonnis, a part time maitre d' at Sally's Steak House, was sentenced to two years in prison Wednesday for what the judge called a "gangster type" crime.

Last month a jury found Adonnis, 36, of 1135 S. 25th St., guilty of being a party to the crimes of aggravated battery and false imprisonment.

Adonnis was charged after he apparently attempted to recover valuables taken in a burglary at the home of Mrs. Sally Papia, the operator of Sally's.

"You took the law into your own hands," Acting Circuit Judge James Rice, Sparta, told Adonnis. "It was a gangster type, strong-arm crime."

"And I believe that you and all people who involve themselves in any such crime of this nature must understand that there will be no probation.... That it will be jail."

First Conviction

He sentenced Adonnis, never convicted of a felony before, to two concurrent terms of two years each in the State Prison at Waupun.

Before the sentencing, Adonnis' attorney, Max Goldsmith, objected to "innuendoes" made by the district attorney's office and in newspaper stories concerning people Adonnis knows.

He referred to Mrs. Papia, Frank Buccieri and his brother, Biore (Fifi) Buccieri. Both Buccieris have long been linked to the Chicago underworld.

At one time Mrs. Papia announced that she was marrying Frank, but it is not known whether the marriage took place.

Lee Wells, an assistant district attorney, said that Adonnis' actions couldn't be justified by the fact he was trying to recover loot taken from "a friend of this defendant."

Items Returned

Last July, $49,000 worth of valuables were taken from Mrs. Papia's home. Later many of the valuables were returned, but police said they didn't know who returned them.

Allen Quindt, of 6048 N. 61st St., a witness in the Adonnis case, said Adonnis and another unidentified man held him captive in a West Side garage and questioned him about the burglary. He said he was told he was going to be killed.

Quindt's jaw was broken by the other man and a gun was fired near him before Quindt escaped.

Wells said Quindt was lucky to be alive.

Asked for Term

One young man who was convicted of being involved in the burglary asked to be sent to prison last year because he said he was afraid.

Judge Rice told Adonnis, "I refuse to put you on probation," which the Probation Department had recommended. The judge said the reasons were that a gun was used in the incident, the type of crime it was, and that Adonnis had refused to name his accomplice.

US Opposes New Papia Trial

By ALIDA JOHNS

It would be contrary to past court decisions for Mrs. Sally Papia to have a new trial on an extortion charge; because she was acquitted of conspiracy, the government said in a written argument filed Friday with the US 7th Circuit Appeals Court, Chicago.

Mrs. Papia, operator of the downtown Sally's Steak House, has appealed her conviction and sentence in Federal Court here. Three other defendants in the case, Russell J. Enea, Joseph V. Basile and Maximillion J. Adonnis, also have appealed.

3 Found Guilty

Mrs. Papia was found guilty in a jury trial last December of extortion in connection with threats against a former chef who owed her money. The other three defendants were found guilty of conspiracy to commit extortion.

The government's 70 page brief argued that the jury correctly acquitted Mrs. Papia of conspiracy but found her guilty of extortion.

"Courts have repeatedly stressed that even the return of a wholly inconsistent verdict is proper," the brief said. "If the rule were otherwise, the government would be entitled to have the jury warned that an acquittal on some counts might undermine a guilty verdict on others."

"The jury found that Adonnis, Enea and Basile embarked upon an extortionate credit scheme for the benefit of a third party, Mrs. Papia. Whether or not Mrs. Papia was also an active member of that scheme is irrelevant," the brief continued.

Prohibited by Law

The law "prohibits the use of extortionate means to collect debts or punish for non-repayment," the brief said.

The case revolved around Kurt B. Amidzich, a former chef at Sally's, who left the restaurant owing Mrs. Papia money. He went into partnership at the Northbrook Inn.

Jacob John Schlechter, a government witness in the trial, testified he set fire to the inn on Dec. 30, 1974, on orders from Basile.

The government's brief to the appeals court noted that Judge John W. Reynolds in his posttrial opinion concluded that the evidence was ample to tie the defendants both to the burning of the restaurant and the intended physical harm to Amidzich.

Schlechter also testified that he was told by Enea to break Amidzich's wrists "so he never cooks again." Schlechter was arrested Feb. 14, 1975, by Milwaukee police on unrelated state charges. In his possession at the time was a baseball bat, which he had testified was to be used on Amidzich's wrists.

The government told the appeals court that the tape recorded conversations among Schlechter, after his arrest, and Adonnis, Enea and Basile heard by the jury were proof that the conspiracy did not end with Schlechter's arrest.

"The tapes taken as a whole and considered along with the rest of the record contained too many references to getting the job done and to future anticipated payment for past criminal deeds, too much intense interest in keeping Schlechter out of jail and ferreting out the stool pigeons, and too many recitations regarding each individual member's role in the various forms of retaliation against Amidzich for this court to conclude that the conspiracy ... had died with the arrest of Schlechter," the government said.

Reynolds sentenced Mrs. Papia to 60 days on a work release program, Enea to 3 years in prison, Adonnis to 15 years and Basile to 7 years.

The brief was submitted by US Atty. William J. Mulligan and David B. Bukef, Thomas E. Brown and Leah M. Lampone, the assistant US attorneys who tried the case.

US Fights Appeal by Mrs. Papia

Federal lawyers Friday filed legal papers arguing that the US 7th Circuit Court of Appeals should not overturn Sally Papia's conviction for extortion or the convictions of three men for conspiracy in an extortion plot on Mrs. Papia's behalf.

The papers were taken to the court in Chicago Friday afternoon to oppose the appeals of jury verdicts returned against Mrs. Papia, Russell Enea, Joseph Basile and Maximillion Adonnis, Dec. 19, 1975.

All have asked that the appeals court reverse their conviction on the ground that there was insufficient evidence to support the guilty verdicts and that Federal Judge John Reynolds made several legal errors in the way he conducted the trial.

Further Argument

Mrs. Papia, operator of Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave., also argued that it was inconsistent for her to have been found guilty of extortion when the jury found that she was not guilty of participation with the three men in the conspiracy.

The case centered on evidence that the three men schemed to extort money from Kurt Amidzich, who had been a cook at Mrs. Papia's restaurant for many years before quitting in 1974 to become a partner in a restaurant of his own, the Northbrook Inn.

The restaurant was set afire Dec. 30, 1974.

In its brief to the appeals court, the government said that there was ample evidence of the scheme and the case against Mrs. Papia.

The lawyers cited testimony that she had threatened Amidzich that his restaurant could be burned and had told others that she was displeased with Amidzich.

Reynolds sentenced Mrs. Papia to 60 days in jail on a work release program, Enea to 3 years in prison, Adonnis to 15 years and Basile to 2 years.

Mrs. Papia Appeals Threat Conviction

Special to The Sentinel

Chicago, Ill.—Milwaukee restaurant operator Sally Papia went to the US 7th Circuit Court of Appeals here Friday in an effort to overturn her extortion conviction in connection with threats against a former chef who owed her money.

She and her daughter, Candy, accompanied her attorney, Franklyn M. Gimbel, for unusually lengthy oral arguments before the three judge panel.

Also heard were the appeals of three other defendants, Russell J. Enea, Joseph V. Basile and Maximillion J. Adonnis, who are seeking to overturn convictions of conspiracy to commit extortion in the same case. Mrs. Papia, who also was charged with conspiracy, was found not guilty on that charge.

The judges, William Bauer, Harlington Wood and S. Hugh Dillon, took the appeals under advisement after granting the defense and prosecution 45 minutes each for arguments, compared with the usual limit of 20 minutes each. Written arguments had been filed earlier.

Mrs. Papia, operator of Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave., was found guilty in a jury trial last Dec. 19 of making threats against Kurt B. Amidzich, a former chef at the restaurant who later went into partnership at the Northbrook Inn.

Amidzich Sued Over Restaurant Lease Terms

Kurt B. Amidzich, 33, a key figure in the Sally Papia extortion trial conviction, has been sued for $29,000 in Milwaukee County Circuit Court in connection with his operation of Kurt's New Northbrook Inn at Okauchee in Waukesha County.

The suit was started by Ford Land Development Corp. of Okauchee, which said in the complaint that it had entered into a lease for the restaurant with Amidzich last April. The complaint said Amidzich was $4,000 behind in rent payments as well as

$25,000 behind on other obligations involved in the lease. Amidzich, a former chef for Mrs. Papia at Sally's Steak House, had briefly been a partner in the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St., which burned in an arson fire in December, 1974. Mrs. Papia and three others were convicted of extortion and threats to Amidzich last year.

It was informant's opinion one of the reasons SALLY did this was to insure that RUSS ENEA and others involved in the federal extortion case with her would keep quiet if their conviction was upheld. Informant noted SALLY would undoubtedly not serve any time in jail, while RUSS and the others who were acting in her behalf would wind up serving time for her.

Informant has further heard that in connection with SALLY opening a new restaurant in the Office on the Square Building, it was the management of that building that came to SALLY, attempting to get her to open such a restaurant. Four prostitutes who allegedly were solicited to work a convention at the request of a restaurant owner here made a total of about $1,400 in three days, a state witness said Monday.

Herbert Holland, testifying at the trial of Angelo Fazio, said he and another man recruited the women after Fazio asked them to do so.

Fazio, 61, who owns Fazio's Restaurant & Cocktail Lounge, 1601 N. Jackson St., is charged with two counts of soliciting prostitutes. Both offenses allegedly occurred in March, 1974.

"Jack Schlechter, myself and Joe Basile were to take one-third of the gross," Holland said. "Jimmy Taucher (the bartender at Fazio's) was to make 10% and Mr. Fazio said he didn't want any cash because he'd be getting it back in business."

"They were to work over at Fazio's restaurant and at the list of motels that I mentioned. They would have to drive back and forth."

Both Holland and Basile were convicted in 1975 of conspiracy to commit extortion in a Federal Court case involving Sally Papia, operator of Sally's Steak House. Schlechter was an unindicted co-conspirator in the same case.

Holland said on several occasions, he and Schlechter went to one of the motels to check on the girls, who were instructed to charge $50 for each sex act.

He said on March 9, 1974, Basile rented a room at one of the motels, using a phony name, "to have as a command post type deal for the girls to come.... They dropped off their take for that day, the money they received for prostitution."

The trial is scheduled to continue Tuesday before Circuit Judge Victor Manian.

were convicted of conspiracy to commit extortion in a Federal Court case involving Sally Papia, operator of Sally's Steak House on the East Side. Schlechter was an unindicted co-conspirator in that case.

Holland and Schlechter were promised by the District Attorney's Office, that they would not be prosecuted in connection with their testimony. They have not been granted formal immunity in the case.

Named Motels

Holland said the prostitutes drove back and forth between Fazio's restaurant, where they met many conventioners, and several motels and hotels he named most of them near Mitchel Field.

He testified that the places were the Holiday Inn — South; Ramada Inn — South; Red Carpet Inn on S. Howell Ave., and Holiday Inn Central Downtown.

He said the prostitutes' price was $50 for each sex act.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Richard Trujillo said in opening remarks to the jury that Holland and the other procurers were instructed by Fazio to tell the prostitutes how to act, what to do and what not to do.

Holland said he brought two of the prostitutes to the restaurant for Fazio's approval. The women were scheduled to testify for the state as the trial continued before Circuit Judge Victor Manian Tuesday.

Adonnis Queried By Jury

Maximillion J. Adonnis, now a prisoner at the State Prison at Waupun, appeared briefly before the federal grand jury here Wednesday.

Adonnis, 41, consulted with his attorney, Thomas P. Doherty, after leaving the grand jury meeting room.

It was not known why Adonnis was called before the grand jury. Witnesses appear before a grand jury to give information. It does not mean they are suspected of wrongdoing.

Adonnis is serving a 15-year prison sentence on a conviction of conspiracy to commit extortion in a case involving restaurant operator Sally Papia and others.

The federal sentence is being served concurrently with an eight year state sentence for a conviction on grand auto theft.

Court Rejects Jennaro Appeal

Staff Correspondence

Madison, Wis. — The April, 1975, conviction of James Jennaro for soliciting for prostitution has been upheld by the Wisconsin Supreme Court.

Jennaro, 47, contended in the appeal that Reserve Circuit Judge Max Raskin should have separated his trial from that of a co-defendant, LeRoy Bell. Bell did not join Jennaro in the appeal to the high court.

Justice Nathan S. Heffernan, writing the unanimous opinion of the court, stated that "the trial court properly denied Jennaro's motion for severance before and during trial and that no prejudice resulted to Jennaro as a result of the joinder or as the result of evidence adduced at the joint trial."

Jennaro was a manager of Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave.

Theft Nets $5,241 at Restaurant

Sally's Restaurant, 1028 E. Juneau Ave., lost $5,241 in a burglary, police reported Monday.

The money was taken from an unlocked office desk after an air conditioner was removed from an office window.

The burglary occurred between 11 a.m. Sunday and 7:45 a.m. Monday, police said.

Police said the thief or thieves tried unsuccessfully to pry open a locked door of the office before going outside and removing the air conditioner.

The restaurant, which is owned by Mrs. Sally Papia, is closed Sundays. The money in the desk was the restaurant's weekend receipts, Mrs. Papia said.

Local News in Brief

IRS Investigates Amidzich on 1974 Taxes

Kurt Amidzich, who was the key figure in the arson and extortion trial involving restaurant owner Sally Papia, is being investigated by the Internal Revenue Service for failing to file income tax returns in 1974.

Federal Magistrate John C. McBride has ordered Amidzich, of 4409 N. 91st St., to appear before him Sept. 15 to explain why he has not turned over the financial records that were subpoenaed by the IRS in March.

Amidzich worked for Mrs. Papia as a chef at Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave., before resigning in 1974 to open his own restaurant. His restaurant was destroyed Dec. 30, 1974, in a blaze police said was arson.

Mrs. Papia was convicted of extortion for making threats against Amidzich, who owed her money. Three men tried with her were convicted of conspiracy for being involved in the arson.

'Sentence Shift' Sought by Enea

Russell J. Enea, convicted of conspiracy to commit extortion in a case with Sally Papia, Milwaukee restaurant owner, has asked for a modification of his three year federal prison sentence.

Enea's lawyer, Frank J. Schiro, petitioned Federal Judge John W. Reynolds to allow his client to serve on a work-release program. Schiro said the three year term would be an economic and emotional hardship on Enea's wife and their three children.

The petition also asked the judge to reduce the sentence in order to permit an earlier parole release than after the two years and four months provided for in a three year sentence.

Included with the petition was a letter commending Enea written by his present employer, James Paolo, operator of the Ram's Head Inn, 2023 S. Kinnickinnic Ave. Enea formerly worked in Mrs. Papia's restaurant, Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave.

The conviction of Mrs. Papia, Enea and two others has been upheld by the 7th Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago. Enea has been free on bond pending the appeals court ruling.

The charges against the four related to threats made against a former chef at Mrs. Papia's restaurant who owed her money when he left the job.

Shorter Sentence Sought

A man who was convicted of conspiring to commit arson in a case with Milwaukee restaurant operator Sally Papia has asked Federal Judge John W. Reynolds to reduce his three year prison term.

In a petition filed with the court, lawyers for Russell J. Enea asked that he be allowed to serve his sentence on a work release program and that the total sentence be reduced to make Enea eligible for parole earlier. The petition said the term would be a financial and emotional hardship on Enea's family.

The convictions of Enea, Mrs. Papia and two others recently were upheld by the 7th Circuit Court of Appeals. All have been free on bail while appeals were being heard.

Jail Term Change Rejected

A petition by Russell J. Enea asking for a modification of his three year federal prison sentence has been denied by Federal Judge John W. Reynolds.

Enea was convicted of conspiracy to commit extortion in a case involving Sally Papia, a Milwaukee restaurant owner. Enea had asked to serve on a work release program so that the term would not be an economic and emotional hardship on his family.

Charges against Enea, Mrs. Papia and two others related to threats made against a former chef at Mrs. Papia's restaurant who owed her money when he left the job.

Sally Papia To Begin Sentence

Sally Papia, widely known Milwaukee restaurant operator, was expected to turn herself in to authorities early Tuesday to begin serving a 60-day sentence for a federal extortion conviction.

Mrs. Papia and her attorney, Franklyn Gimbel, said she would report to the Waukesha County Jail, which houses federal prisoners, at 12:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Mrs. Papia will be jailed under a work release program, enabling her to work at her restaurant, Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave.

A three-judge panel of the US Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago upheld the conviction in August. Gimbel and Mrs. Papia said they decided not to appeal to the US Supreme Court.

Sally Papia Begins Jail Term

Milwaukee restaurant operator Sally Papia turned herself in at the Waukesha County Jail at 1 a.m. Tuesday to begin a 60 day jail term for extortion.

The sentence allows her to be released for work at her restaurant, Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave.

The US Circuit Court of Appeals rejected Mrs. Papia's appeal of her conviction. The conviction involved threats to Kurt B. Amidzich, a chef who once worked for Mrs. Papia but left to open his own restaurant. At the time he left, Amidzich owned money to Mrs. Papia. Amidzich's restaurant was destroyed by fire.

She Serves Food by Day Time by Night

By WILLIAM JANZ

On a shelf behind Sally Papia's desk in an office in her restaurant is a photograph of Frank Sinatra.

"A friend," she said.

And a picture of another singer, Al Martino.

"He called me Saturday," she said.

And a box of corn flakes.

Mrs. Papia laughed.

"When I was sick recently, the doctor said no more spices so I said, what am I going to eat that I can't put spices in?"

She picked up the box of corn flakes and hugged it.

The widely known, widely publicized restaurant operator has won awards with her restaurant, been shot at; beaten up, threatened, protected by police and also arrested by them. She is an Italian enigma, who cooks great food for the elite as well as those people law enforcement officers call hoodlums.

Mrs. Papia was interviewed Tuesday after she finished her first night in jail, with 59 more to go unless she is released early from her sentence for extortion.

During the day, she runs Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave., and from 1 a.m. to 9 a.m., she is a federal prisoner.

"I made my own decision about starting to serve the time," she said. "I just want to get it over with so I can put the past aside. It could have been worse. My attorney, Franklyn Gimbel, did a super job."

She said this with employees running in and out of the office, the telephone ringing and people lining up outside the door to be interviewed for jobs. It was as if the Green Bay Packers had invited Mrs. Papia into a phone booth to watch them practice.

She said she had decided to stop appealing her case further and accept the 60-day sentence for extortion in connection with threats against a former chef who owed her money. There was a fire at the man's restaurant.

"I don't think they thought I'd look like this. I think they had a picture of seeing a tough, hussy, blond bomber, that's Sally Papia."

Mrs. Papia has associated with some of the biggest names in the underworld in the Midwest, as well as judges, ballplayers, entertainers and community leaders. They know she is in a class apart from the blond bombers of Milwaukee.

In recent months, Mrs. Papia expressed concern about her sentence and even dreamed about it. She dreamed, she told several customers, that she was assigned to the jail kitchen, naturally.

"No more bread and water," I announced in my dream," she said, laughing in one of the best known restaurants in the city.

When she reported to the Waukesha County Jail, where federal prisoners are held, "they took my fingerprints," she said. "And they took my picture with, you know, numbers across here," she said, pointing to her chest.

"Everybody did their duty, put they did it nicely. Nice,

On Tuesday, she only raised her voice once during the interview.

"The bum," she said, referring to a witness at her trial;

Turning to a reporter, Candy Papia said, "I want to tell you this."

She said at the beginning of the summer she accidentally met a young man whose mother was on the jury that convicted Mrs. Papia.

"All she did the day after the verdict was cry," she quoted the young man as saying. "I know the lady was innocent," he said his mother said.

Mrs. Papia interrupted. "He doesn't want to hear about that. Don't get emotional. It's over with."

She's serving her time and she mentioned someone else who is serving his time, under much worse conditions.

"Hey," she said, referring to a former employee. "Max Adonis is still in Waupun. Say something nice about my Maxie. He works hard and he's so well liked up there and he has such respect for me."

"I go to see him and he says, 'Hi, boss.' He says to the guys up there, 'This is a real lady, so open the door for her.'

"You know, Max used to wear a hairpiece, but his hair is growing—he's doing so well up there. I said, 'Max, what'd they do to your hair? You're growing hair.'

"His sense of humor never left him. Now I'll have to try to keep mine."

Reynolds Cuts Prison Term For Adonnis

Federal Judge John W. Reynolds has reduced the prison term of Maximillion J. Adonnis, 42, convicted in 1975 of conspiracy to commit extortion.

Reynolds reduced the sentence from 15 years to 8. He is expected to sign the order modifying the sentence early next week.

The reduced sentence was worked out in a conference this week between Reynolds; Thomas E. Brown, an assistant US attorney, and Thomas Doherty, Adonnis' attorney. Reynolds ordered the record of the meeting sealed.

Adonnis and four other defendants were convicted in December, 1975, in connection with attempts to collect money owed to restaurant owner Sally Papia.

Earlier this month, Circuit Judge John F. Foley reduced from eight years to three Adonnis' prison term stemming from his conviction in 1975 on two counts of auto theft.

Sentence Cut for Adonis

Circuit Judge John F. Foley has reduced the prison term of Maximillion J. Adonis, convicted in 1975 of two counts of grand auto theft.

Foley reduced the sentence to three years on each count to run concurrently. Foley had sentenced him to eight years.

When Foley sentenced Adonis in 1975, he said the charge against him was in connection with a ring; the judge said stole about $80,000 worth of automobiles.

Adonis, manager of AFL Motors and a former head waiter at Sally's Steak House, had pleaded guilty to the two counts. He also had been sentenced to a 15-year term by Federal Judge John W. Reynolds after being convicted of conspiracy to commit extortion in a case involving Sally Papia, owner of the restaurant, and others.

Fire at Sally's Steak House Probed

Police are investigating an alleged arson attempt Thursday that caused $40 to $50 damage at Sally's Steak House, 1028 E. Juneau Ave.

According to police, someone slipped paper napkins under the front door of the restaurant at 4:30 a.m. and lighted them. The interior carpet caught fire but was extinguished by three restaurant employees.

Sally Papia, the restaurant owner, is serving a 60 day term in the Waukesha County Jail for extortion. The sentence permits her to be released for work at her establishment. She was charged with threatening to burn down the restaurant of a former employee. That restaurant, the Northbrook Inn, 9601 N. 124th St., was destroyed by fire three years ago.

Judge Lowers Prison Term of Joseph Basile

Circuit Judge Robert Landry has reduced the prison sentence of Joseph Basile from five years to one.

Landry's original sentence, following Basile's no contest plea on a charge of soliciting a woman to commit prostitution, had been made concurrent to a seven year federal term Basile received in April, 1976, for extortion. Basile also was fined $1,000.

Basile's lawyer, Joseph P. Balistreri, asked to have the solicitation sentence reduced. He said that it was unduly harsh and that two co-defendants had been placed on probation only. The co-defendants are Angelo Fazio and James Taucher.

Restaurateur settles dispute on back pay

By Robert M. Riepenhoff

of The Journal Staff

Sally Papia, owner of Sally's Steak House, has agreed to pay 71 employees a total of $15,000 in back wages, an agreement filed in Federal Court here Thursday shows.

Last year, the US Labor Department, acting on a complaint from an employee of the restaurant, filed a complaint against Papia and Sally's Steak House & Cocktail Lounge Inc., alleging that the restaurant had underpaid several employees in violation of the Fair Labor Standards Act. The restaurant and bar are at 1028 E. Juneau Ave.

The agreement, which has been signed by Papia, includes a prohibition against paying employees less than the minimum wage and less than time and a half for all hours worked beyond 40 hours in a week.

The $15,000 will be paid to the Labor Department, which will distribute it to the employees.

The wage violations were believed to have involved waitresses, cooks, bartenders and parking attendants and to have occurred over a period of about three years.

Documents on file with the Wisconsin secretary of state list Sally Papia and her daughter, Candy, as owners of the restaurant and bar. Sally Papia is listed as the general manager.

Sally Papia

In 1976, Sally Papia was sentenced to 60 days in jail on work-release after a conviction for extortion.

Sally Papia fined for drunken driving

Sally Papia, proprietor of Sally's Steak House, has pleaded no contest to a charge of drunken driving and has been fined $447.

Papia, 51, of 2880 N. Memomonee River Pkwy., was arrested by Milwaukee police Sept. 25 at the corner of N. Jackson St. and E. Kilbourn Ave. She was found to have a blood-alcohol level of 0.12% at the time, above the .10% that is the legal standard of intoxication.

Papia originally pleaded not guilty but changed her plea in court. She was accompanied in court by Franklyn Gimbel, a Milwaukee lawyer.

Municipal Judge William J. Paganis suspended Papia's driver's license for 180 days.
